Report on NSCS Presentation at NSCS National Leadership Conference

This summer I attended the National Society of Collegiate Scholar's national leadership conference in Houston, Texas. At this conference I represented Winona State University and gave a presentation to other chapter officers entitled March To College: Staying One Step Ahead of the PACE. During this presentation we gave other officers tips on running a successful March To College program. My Vice President Abby Thomson and myself believe that our presentation went better than expected! We presented on the first day of the conference, which left one full day of workshops for us to attend. The second day we went to one-hour workshops and speakers. In these sessions I learned how to make my chapter stronger through with our social media sites and member engagement. Along with learning how to improve our chapters I made valuable connections with officer from across the country. Months after the conference I am still in contact with these officers, sharing valuable advice about how to run events for our chapters. This leadership conference was more than I had imagined and I am very grateful that I received the opportunity to attend and learn as much as I did.

Report on NSCS Presentation (Houston, TX)

Attending and presenting at the National Society of Collegiate Scholars (NSCS) National Leadership Summit was one of the most beneficial experiences I have had throughout my collegiate career at Winona State. This opportunity allowed me to present to an array of NSCS chapters from throughout the United States. Because of our exemplary March to College Day that we hold annually, we were able to share ideas with other chapters and provide them with the information necessary to run a successful March to College Day. By encouraging the implementation of successful March to College Days throughout the country, we are ultimately convincing more and more students to go to college, which is truly improving our world. Beyond the opportunity to teach, I am confident that I brought back more information than I imparted. I gained a plethora of new ideas that can be carried back to Winona State's Chapter of NSCS and the Winona community. I had the opportunity to network and grow as a professional. I feel that Carly and I positively represented Winona State at the national level. I firmly believe that this experience allowed us to demonstrate that at Winona State we we are a community of learners dedicated to improving our world.
