PEANUTS FROM ASIA ARE POURING INTO AMERICAN MARKETS

American Growers and Oil Producers Alarmed for Future of Indus

The dominant factor in the present industry seems to be the fact that the year has been characterized by a lack of realized optimism. In contrast to previous years, during April alone, 2,387,293 pounds of peanuts were imported into this country, an increase of 25.6 per cent over the average for the same period in 1927.

For weeks it was almost impossible to get peanuts actually produced in China and crushed credited to Japan, and only 42,825,562 pounds, or 4.2 per cent, of the total came from this source. This was due in a large measure to the fact that the Japanese, seizing the opportunity presented by the American tariff of 4 cents per pound on peanuts, have taken advantage of it to capitalize on the situation which existed in China. Even after this favorable tariff was imposed, however, there was an increase in the amount of peanuts imported from China, as the Chinese growers, realizing the advantages of the American market, have taken steps to increase their production and shipments.

According to the experts, the present situation is the result of several factors, including the increased demand for peanuts in the United States, the rising prices of peanuts in China, and the relatively low prices paid in the United States for peanuts. These factors have combined to create a favorable situation for the Chinese growers, and they have been able to capitalize on it to their advantage.

The outlook for the future of the peanut industry in the United States is not bright. The increased demand for peanuts and the rising prices of peanuts in China are likely to continue, and this will probably result in an increase in the amount of peanuts imported from China. This will, in turn, have a detrimental effect on the peanut industry in the United States, as it will mean a decrease in the amount of peanuts produced and sold in this country.
