Too many bouncy checks

By now you've probably all seen those little notices that have been posted around campus. The little notice that says it's illegal to write checks for which there are insufficient funds.

There have been a great many of these checks written by students this fall. Although it occasionally happens that a student writes one of these checks without realizing that he does not have enough money to cover it, the consequences of this are serious.

I feel it's important to point out how many students have been reported to the business office this fall. Although it occasionally happens that a student writes one checks for which there are insufficient funds, in this case the consequences are serious.

First of all, the person who receives the check does not get the money until the check is cleared. If the check does not clear, the late fee will go into effect. If the student has not paid the late fee, the person who receives the check does not get the money until the check is cleared.

Secondly, the student who wrote the check will have a negative balance on his account. This will result in other problems, such as the inability to write checks for other than an identification card.

The article now threatens to tack onto this amount another $500 for those who refuse to buy the yearbook. Even if Maxxato doesn't do this, I think most students are in favor of getting a little bit more than what they paid for a cause I will never see.

The ten dollars fall anyway, which means that the student who is defenseless and can't afford the $500. I know it's a pain in the neck, but I can't see any way around it.

A meeting just to criticize the yearbook staff is going to be held every Tuesday night in the new student union. This will enable them to have smoother, more efficient operation than if they did when they all shared offices in the same two buildings Pasture and Rooms.

As I view it . . .

I would like to remind you that the staff of the Winonan have written a number of excellent articles on the lack of P.O.'s on campus. We hope that you will watch your checks in the future to see if there is enough money in your account to cover the check.

Silveres retires to Bahamas

by Phil Silver

Now that the big news has been announced to those of you who have missed my last few articles, let me close with a few closing comments. After a long and hard before campaign, I felt a very comfortable elation. It's coming DEPARTMENT:

Now school directories are complete, and will be put up for distribution at the time when students start for their classes. The directories will be put together by a very competent Winonan Keys or- ganization, which, although quite expensive, will provide up-to-date information concerning courses, numbers, room numbers, and, of course, addresses. If you want the W-Keys you should be on hand for a JOB WELL DONE!

If all these clubs on campus feel that they are being slighted, why not go to the student union and present your case? There was no meeting to air Club feel- ings. It is the first time in the history of the Winonan that all clubs at once had an opportunity to express their opinion on the Winonan.

TOO BEER LOOK

The basketball team, which is composed of boys who have not been notified, will be on the winning side of the book. The club has been formed by Jan Westing, who has again promised to have each club president be notified and be expected to have each club president be notified.

The basketball schedule will be released in time for the students to be notified, and the club has been formed by Jan Westing, who has again promised to have each club president be notified.

Dear Editor:

There are many reasons that a person goes to a meeting of any kind. One of the best known is the statement that "It is good for business." This is also true of a meeting of any kind. But the statement "It is good for business," if true, will result in a meeting of any kind." It is true that the purpose of a meeting is to make a profit, but the statement "It is good for business," if true, will result in a meeting of any kind." It is true that the purpose of a meeting is to make a profit, but I would suggest that it is not a very good way of doing business.

Mr. Ellestad also states that the University should be putting together a committee to discuss any question about the University. We hope that you will vote for the WSC campus and the WSC staff. We hope that you will vote for the WSC campus and the WSC staff.
Earth science students go caving

Twenty-five members of the introductory geology class at WSC recently spent the better part of a Sunday afternoon on a field excursion exploring sections of the Mystery Cave system near Spring Valley.

The party, splitting into two groups to explore various parts of the cave, was led by the Explorers Club supported by Professor John Bailer, John Boles, Richard Hild and Ronald Smith.

Dr. Frank Van Abtine, a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin, led his group through the cave. He explained to his students the cave's development through the ages and the various methods of exploration and research that are used to study such geological formations.

The cave is located in the southeastern part of Minnesota and consists of two major cavern systems: the Long Cavern and the Short Cavern. The Long Cavern is approximately 12 miles long and has large chambers and passageways, while the Short Cavern is smaller and more tightly packed with smaller chambers.

Several different species of bats make their home in the cave, including the grey bat, the little brown bat, and the big brown bat. These bats play an important role in the ecosystem of the cave by controlling insect populations and contributing to the overall biodiversity of the area.

The experience was both educational and challenging, as the students had to navigate through tight passages and overcome obstacles such as water seepage and slippery surfaces. The group also observed several speleothems, or cave formations, including stalactites and stalagmites, which are formed when calcium carbonate is deposited from water dripping from above.

The students were also able to observe various types of cave animals, such as spiders and insects, which are adapted to life in the dark and humid environment of the cave.

The day ended with a group dinner at a local restaurant, where the students and faculty had a chance to discuss their experiences and learn more about the science of cave exploration.

Varsity Rolls 84-68;

Stallings, Meisner star

Led by Dave Meisner and Tom Stallings the WSC varsity rolled to an 84-68 victory over the frosh last Tuesday at Memorial Hall. However, the contest wasn't really decided until about five minutes remained to play. The hot shooting of Keith Asel, Mike Benedict and Dwane Davis kept the score close most of the way. But the experience, speed, and polish of the varsity began to shine as the pressure grew.

Those in double figures for the varsity were Stallings 19, Meisner 18, and Dave Goede (Capt.) 14. The frosh scores were Keith Asel 19, Benedict 16, and Dwane Davis 10.
