The idea behind this year's slogan is that much is now being done in the exploration of outer space; how ever, much can now be done to explore the inner space, namely that of the mind. One way of exploring with the mind is reading thus making use of the library facilities that are available to you.

SOMETHING NEW has been added to the collection at Maxwell Library. Mrs. Joardt and Mr. Lauritson, with the aid of the 1967 pledge class of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, have acquired a collection of college catalogs for both graduate and undergraduate studies of the more prominent colleges and most state colleges in the United States. This collection is in the reading room of the library, arranged by states and open for regular two-week circulation.

The librarians are arranging the movement of the various book collection from the old building to the new addition. So far the major thieves have been moved, next will be the fiction. The move progresses a page system will be set up so that if a collection can not be found the student should ask for the book he is seeking and it will be sought by the page. For the first time longer but the people using the library are asked to be patient with the situation.

WSCI will host summer institutes
Eight institutes and workshops, including computer science, electronics for teachers and a geology tour to the West, are on the summer programs at Winona State College.

Also there are seminars on the culturally disadvantaged child and the inner city school child and their education. They will be the weeks of June 26 and July 31.

The dates of the workshops are:

- Computer Science Workshop, July 7 through Aug. 6, Data Processing Workshop, July 5-22, Elettronics for Teachers, Aug. 7-23.
- Aerospa e Education, July 10-20, Con servation Workshop, July 4-19, and the Health Problems Workshop, July 31-Aug. 5.

In addition, Reading Practice will be available in both summer sessions, which begin June 13, and July 17.

National Library Week comes but once a year; this year it is being observed April 16-22. This year's slogan is, "Explore inner space, READ!"

Should women have hours?

"I don’t see any reason for no hours for seniors and women over 21, and later hours on Sunday. She is very pleased, she added with the work of the Women’s Residence Hall Council, and stressed that when the women bring up suggestions and improvements, they should be taken into consideration on the basis of how they will help the dormitories and dormitory life at WSC.

CONCERN HAS been growing and rumors flying among students as to what the new hours will mean. Many who have been closeted in for the past three years are concerned about having to live in normal family circumstances. Students who have completed at least their junior year are eligible to apply for professional membership on the research team now being formed.

M. J. McCauley teaches first electronics lecture, lab

For the first time, Winona State is offering an electronics course. It was taught fall and winter quarters. The class applies to the physics major and minor. The course prerequisite is one year of physics.

There are nine students in the class: 4 boys and 5 girls. It is taught by Mr. McCauley.

There will be two hours of lecture per week and four hours of laboratory. The use of the Heath Multimatic IIc Instrumentation Laboratory. Each student has his own unit. It includes basic equipment plus some special problems. In addition, the laboratory has supplementary equipment such as radio analyzers.

Mr. McCauley feels that the course will definitely expand in the future. "This is a course which is valuable to other fields of science. Nowadays, other people will need a better background in electronics especially with computers," said McCauley.

N. Baron lectures on geography at WSC's first Turk's Head Club

The first meeting of an informal faculty association, the Turk's Head Club, was held on April 17 in the Library. Present at the meeting was Mr. Edward Jacobson, head librarian, assisted by Mr. Frederick Lauritsen, librarian, who served as secretary.

In his introductory remarks, Jacobson pointed to another "first" at Winona State, as the Turk's Head Club represents an attempt to exchange ideas among faculty members about current research in progress. The program has received endorsement from President Robert DuFresne, who will also participate in the program, as well as from representatives from all divisions of the College.

THE INAUGURAL speech was presented by Norman Baron, geography professor.

The biggest accomplishment of this "first" was the initiation of more student opinions in the faculty and administrative committees. The Senate seemed to get more attention from the students and faculty because of the forums and WINONAN publicity. Yet Kanavati added, "The number of students attending the SS meetings was still low." But he attributed this to a laziness on the students' part to actually come to the meetings.

THE MAJOR problem encountered by Kanavati during his office was a party split. The Senate appeared to be composed of sub-leaders, each of whom had a small backing. While on this "party" subject, Kanavati complained that he thinks WSC is too small for a political party, but it would have a better potential if this party had opposition.

When comparing the Senate of WSC to that of other state colleges, Kanavati felt that Winona's wasn't equal in personnel, but was lacking in power.

When asked what was the major qualifications for a senator, Kanavati responded with only one word, "Responsibility." Also, he added that "Independents are the best for the job." By "Independents" he meant non-Greek affiliated students. According to Mr. Kanavati, they would not be obligated to voice the opinion of the Greeks, but would be able to do their job to represent students and themselves.

In a prediction for next year's Senate, Louise Kanavati stated their main job should be to improve student respect and interest in the Student Senate, since the Winona Senate only did slight progress in this area. "The club representatives have been just taking up space," said Kanavati. He hoped that more representative involvement can take place next year.

In conclusion, the year of Student Senate presidency was rewarding to Louise Kanavati.
