Carpenter Cites Dramatic Rescue

Set to Return To Canaveral On Sunday

By VERN HAUGLAND
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Malcolm Scott Carpenter may have been in more danger during his triple flight around the earth than even he realized, it was disclosed today.

The communications team that tracked Carpenter on three orbits around the earth indicated today that he may have become dangerously tired — even confused — on the last time around.

This startling information came to light in a post-flight debriefing, by radio hookup, among all 7 stations on the Project Mercury worldwide network.

It could help explain why the Aurora 7 capsule re-entered the atmosphere at such a shallow angle, at the end of its orbital journey Thursday, that it overshot the planned landing area by some 250 miles.

It might also account in part for the dead silence from Carpenter that mystified and alarmed millions, and threw searchers into a vast manhunt, from the moment of re-entry until the astronaut was located 41 minutes later.

The tracking station at Kauai, Hawaii, said that when it instructed Carpenter to get ready to fire his braking rockets on the approach to California, "he started doing something else."

"We had the impression that he was very confused about what was going on, but it was very difficult to assess whether he was confused or preoccupied," the station said.

The Woomera, Australia, station agreed that "we also feel the astronaut was acting somewhat tired during the last pass."

From the Bermuda post came a suggestion that oxygen pressure in Carpenter's raft may have been low and that an emergency oxygen system should have been used.

Carpenter was resting, meanwhile, at Jamaica-controlled Grand Turk Island, where he had an emotional reunion Thursday night with John H. Glenn Jr., the first American to go into orbit.

In relative isolation, he will tell his exciting story there to physicians and spacecraft technicians — before he can forget any part of it.

And then, probably on Sunday, he will be returned here for a news conference — a clinical discussion of the most dramatic bit of space fiction yet to come true.

To the scientists, the engineers and the space medicine workers who monitored every minute of the almost-five-hours-long flight, this was a major milestone on the way to the moon.

The mission brought to light new dangers — the hazards of missing landing target areas by wide margins, for example — and pointed toward solutions of some of the problems of man in space.

It opened up, too, new vistas of voyage by satellite.

It may even have advanced the United States manned space program beyond the phase of three- or even five- or seven-orbit flights, and on to the field of 18-orbit, all-day missions.

The launching of Carpenter's Aurora 7 spacecraft at 7:45 a.m. Eastern Standard Time Thursday was a perfect one. The orbit into which the Atlas vehicle inserted the capsule was near the ideal.

And the orbital flight itself, as ticked off in Carpenter's flat, terse reports, seemed almost routine in spite of nagging little problems that kept cropping up.

Red China Stops Flow of Refugees

By CONRAD FINK
HONG KONG (AP) — A competent border source said the flow of refugees across the Chinese border into Hong Kong had stopped today and it appeared the Communists had taken positive action to curb the exodus which had sent 60,000 across since May 1.

The source said the Hong Kong border situation "has reverted to normal."

British army troops were starting to withdraw from the border area and preparations were under way to close down the detention camp where captured refugees have been held until they could be returned to Red China.

Sunrises Beautiful, Carpenter Declares

By JOHN BARBOUR
GRAND TURK ISLAND, Bahamas (AP) — "Boy, the sunrises and sunsets! They are more beautiful than anything I have seen on this earth."

With that small beginning, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Malcolm Scott Carpenter began to tell his story — the story of the second American space pilot to whirl around the earth.

The brain picking session begins in earnest today as Carpenter, his fellow astronauts and other Project Mercury officials try to dredge up every last detail of Thursday's flight.

The plan now is to finish the de-briefing in time to return Carpenter to Cape Canaveral Sunday. There he will face a news conference and a motorcade from Patrick Air Force Base through the town of Cocoa Beach and on to the missile launching site where he was blasted into space Thursday.

Carpenter spent Thursday night in the small hospital on the grounds of a U.S. Air Force auxiliary base on this British Island. With him were fellow astronauts, Marine Lt. Col. John Glenn Jr., the first American to orbit the earth, and Carpenter's back-up pilot, Navy Cmdr. Walter M. Schirra. Also on hand were flight surgeons Howard A. Minners and William K. Douglas.

How long they talked before Carpenter decided to go to bed wasn't known. But Carpenter did not show the fact that he had been up nearly 24 hours when he arrived Thursday night, his face beaming with satisfaction.

Glenn was the first to the door of the Navy plane that brought Carpenter from the aircraft carrier Intrepid. He reached in, brushed Carpenter's cheek with his own and hugged the new space hero, a man who had been Glenn's own back-up pilot through the many delays of the first orbital flight, Feb. 20.

Then as he backed away to let others congratulate Carpenter, Glenn wiped a tear from his right eye.

Carpenter's health had been pronounced excellent after a quick look by doctors.

Asked if he had any anxious moments he was reported as saying:

"Yep, I had a few moments of anxiety near the retro fire (the firing of rockets to slow the spacecraft for reentry) over whether I was going to have enough fuel (to control the attitude of the space vehicle during reentry.)"

Earlier, Glenn, smiling as he waited for Carpenter's arrival, said it had "turned into a pretty good evening."

Did he have any doubt about it before?

"I don't think there was anyone on Cape Canaveral who didn't have some doubt sometime during the day," Glenn answered. "I know I did."

Carpenter got off the plane wearing blue coveralls, a uniform of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Losing Fight Predicted for Rasmussen

By JACK B. MACKAY
Associated Press Correspondent
DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — The state Democratic - Farmer - Labor party opened its annual convention today, with oldtime "party warhorses" poised to fight what is expected to be a losing battle to get endorsement for Paul C. Rasmussen for reelection to the Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

Top billing will be the endorsement of a candidate for governor. Lt. Gov. Karl F. Rolvaag is in line for enthusiastic support and endorsement for the No. 1 position in the light of endorsements already voted by all eight district conventions.

Rasmussen, chairman of the railroad commission, failed to win endorsement by any of the eight district conventions. One district, the 3rd, indicated he did not represent the ideals of the DFL party.

However, Rasmussen has said he intends to seek endorsement, and to file for reelection "regardless of whether I am endorsed by the convention."

Best bet to get the endorsement for Rasmussen's post is Lee Corcoran, Minneapolis attorney.

A fight also may develop over endorsement for lieutenant governor. Efforts are being made by party leaders to get State Rep. Fred Cina, majority leader of the liberal-dominated Minnesota House of Representatives, to make the race.

If Cina accepts, there isn't expected to be much fireworks. But if he doesn't, it will be a wide open contest with many in the field.

Clinch endorsements are Atty. Gen. Walter F. Mondale and Sec. of State Joseph J. Donovan.

For Congress, the districts have endorsed:

1st District — David Graven, Albert Lea; 2nd — Irving Keldson, former Richfield mayor; 3rd Rep. Joseph Karth, St. Paul; 4th State Sen. Donald Fraser, Minneapolis; 6th Alec Olson, Montevideo; 8th Rep. John Blatnik, Chisholm.

Saturday morning Sen. H. H. Humphrey and Eugene McCarthy, and Reps. Blatnik and Karth are scheduled to speak at a dinner Saturday night.

3 Russ Ships In Test Zone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department said today that three Russian ships are within a few miles of the Pacific nuclear tests area, "obviously on a large-scale military intelligence collection mission."

The largest of the three ships is the modern 3,600-ton research ship Shokalskiy which, the Pentagon said, is extensively equipped with instruments.

Wilkie Appointed To Badger Court

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — State Sen. Horace Wilkie of Madison was appointed to the Wisconsin Supreme Court by Gov. Gaylord Nelson today.

The Democratic senator was named to fill the vacancy created by the death of Chief Justice Grover Bradford.

Wilkie, 45, is a native of Madison. He was first elected to the Senate in 1956 and reelected in 1960.

Bradford was succeeded as chief justice by Justice Timothy Brown earlier this week.

Gov. Nelson said Wilkie will resign his Senate seat.

In the Senate Wilkie saw service with the committees on finance, education, welfare, labor, taxation and insurance.

He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1938 and his law degree from George Washington University in Washington, D. C., in 1944.

A veteran of the Coast Guard in World War Two, Wilkie is a member of a prominent Madison family. His late father, Harold, was a member of the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin. A brother, Edwin, is a circuit judge for Dane County.

The new justice and his wife, the former Marian Beardsley of Madison, have five daughters.

Timothy Brown, a justice of the Supreme Court since 1949, was sworn in Wednesday as the state's 14th chief justice.

The oath was administered by Gladys Langdon, deputy clerk of the court.

Now three years beyond retirement age, Brown will step down in 1964 when his 10-year term expires. He was elected to a full term in 1953.

A spokesman said the doctors could take new examinations and be relicensed if found qualified.

Storms Lash Central and Eastern U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Violent spring storms—tornadoes, heavy rain and hail and strong winds—struck damaging areas in New Jersey, Oklahoma and New York state.

Tornadoes ripped across Waterbury, Conn., and nearby towns and east central Kansas. Severe wind rain and hail storms lashed areas in New Jersey, Oklahoma and New York state.

At least two persons were killed, one man in the tornado in Waterbury and a farmer in an electrical storm in Chittenango, N.Y. Nearly 50 persons were injured, including 35 in Waterbury and 17 in Altus, Okla. None was reported injured seriously.

Property damage in the storm belt was expected to run into the millions of dollars.

In Waterbury, a city of some 110,000 population, 45 homes were destroyed and 150 others damaged. Damage was estimated at several million dollars. The tornado cut a jagged path 100 yards wide in Waterbury.

A twister hit Pennington, N.J., along the southern edge of a storm belt from New York and Pennsylvania into New England. No one was hurt.

Smaller twisters and heavy hail struck Hutchinson, Kan., while other small tornadoes hit 10 miles north of Emporia and near Mount Hope, Allen, and Council Grove. No injuries were reported.

Winds up to 90 miles per hour lashed Oklahoma communities, including Altus, a town of about 20,000 in the southwestern part of the state, and Oklahoma City. Heavy hail pelled areas near Altus, where damage was estimated at several hundred thousand dollars. Fifteen of the 17 injured were treated at hospitals and released.

Units from four of Thailand's allies in the eight-nation Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

The Philippine government said today it was ready to send ground or air forces should the call come. The other two members of the anti-Communist alliance — Pakistan and France — have made no gestures toward joining the military buildup.

The British planes will be based in the northern city of Chiang Mai, about 100 miles from the northwest frontier of Laos where the pro-Communist Pathet Lao are in control.

American forces form the southern anchor of the defensive arc along the frontier, with U.S. Marines based near Udorn, 40 miles south of the pro-Western Laotian government's administrative capital of Vientiane, which is in central Laos. U.S. Army troops are based still farther south, at Khorat, opposite the southern end of Laos.

A U.S. EMBASSY spokesman said the airlifting of American troops and equipment into Thailand will continue for at least another week in the maneuver described by President Kennedy as precautionary. The American military buildup to this Asian ally is scheduled to reach a peak of 5,000 Marines and Army infantry and up to 45 jet planes.

Communist forces in Laos have been reported quiet since before the American landings, but a Thai cabinet minister warned the anti-Communist allies must keep on the alert.

British Jets Join U.S. in Thailand

By TONY ESCODA
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — British jets flew to Bangkok today to join steadily growing American forces in safeguarding Thailand's border against possible Communist aggression from Laos.

Six Hawker Hunter fighters, a Canberra twin-jet light bomber and a Pembroke reconnaissance plane arrived from Singapore. They were the bulk of a Royal Air Force squadron assigned to this pro-Western kingdom.

An R.A.F. spokesman said four more Hawker Hunters would complete the British force, which with ground crews would total 250 men.

A small New Zealand paratroop detachment and an Australian air force contingent also are expected. These will put in the field

NASON ON EDUCATION

Bright Students Have Problems

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed.D.
Professor of Education,
University of Southern California

Sometimes superior students have school problems that are difficult for many people to understand.

Recently, I received these letters from unusually bright students who are faced with these problems.

Dear Dr. Nason:

Like a thousand other children, I have a school problem. I'm called a brilliant student but my teacher stacks up the homework. With a two-hour piano practice and a one-hour play period, I can't get all of it done. What can I do?

M. B., Odessa, Tex.

It sounds outrageously simple but you could learn to do your homework faster. Just by reading your letter I can suggest one way of speeding it up. You can learn to write faster and better.

Take a short sentence and write it several times. Each time, try consciously to improve your handwriting. After you have written the sentence five times, concentrate on speed without losing quality.

Fifteen minutes of practice each day for a couple of weeks will be of considerable help in solving at least one facet of your problem.

Dear Dr. Nason:

My teachers have a tendency to assign as homework material which has no substantial connection with the course. I am extremely interested in all my lessons but, to remind the teachers of my "moderately rebellious character," I have (with permission) tacked up an article entitled "The Unpardonable Sin of Homework." Please understand that by homework I mean writing exercises to be done at home. What can I do about it?

R. M., Pelitcodiac, N. B.

Judging from your letter, you are in a position of many superior students. You are head of your classmates.

Homework is merely "busy work" to you. But it is probably a valuable experience for some other members of the class. Try to be patient with them and, at the same time, keep working toward your own goals.

Add a little salt, lemon juice and sugar to sour cream and serve as a dressing for sliced cucumbers and salad greens.

New Sanitary Ordinance for City Proposed

A comprehensive new ordinance, defining violations and putting teeth into sanitation control and inspection provisions, will be submitted to the City Council by its committee on health and welfare.

The committee, with Chairman Howard Baumann presiding, met Thursday night at City Hall and recommended passage of the ordinance as proposed by Sanitary Inspector Roy Vose. One committee member, Ald. James Soltman, was absent.

A question was raised concerning possible conflicts with existing ordinances but Vose replied he would submit his draft to City Attorney George Robertson Jr. for legal clearance before reporting it to the Council as a whole.

Also present at the committee meeting were John L. Steadman, fire chief; Dr. Warren Haesly, health officer; George Rogge, city building inspector; and Miss Kathryn Tarke, health department laboratory technician.

AS PROPOSED by Vose, who told the committee he has worked on the problem for over two years, the ordinance would permit reduction of many nuisances which cannot now be legally eliminated. Present regulations, some of which date back to the turn of the century, have become badly outmoded, Vose said, seriously hampering inspection procedures and forcing him at times to operate beyond his actually designated authority.

"Present ordinances have so many loopholes," Vose said, "that 90 percent of our work cannot be done by the book." The new ordinance is designed to supplement present regulations, said Vose, and its adoption therefore would not have to await repeal of any regulations now in the book.

Covering a broad range of hazards, the proposed measure deals with such things as extermination of vermin, definition of minimum winter conditions (15 degrees Fahrenheit above lowest recorded temperature in 10 previous years), plumbing installations, refuse storage, littering and unlicensed junking operations.

Vose gave some examples: Exterminators are not at present required to clean up traces of their work, according to the sanitary inspector, and the new law would demand disposal of rodent carcasses and cleanup of residual poisons.

Plumbing deficiencies including faulty drains which cause backup of sewage and possible water contamination, will be legally correctable by city authorities. The present ordinance prohibiting introduction of garbage into city sewer lines, if literally enforced, would outlaw all kitchen sink disposal units, Vose said in calling attention to obsolete portions of city codes.

The present garbage-control measure deals only with garbage produced on the premises. It is ineffective in cases where the rubbish originates elsewhere, Vose said. A new law would prohibit accumulation of refuse on property, no matter where it came from, including that spilling over from neighboring property. Anti-littering provisions also would come into play in such situations.

Junked cars, appliances, scrap metals and other materials stored by other than licensed junk dealers would have to be housed in permanent type shelters, out of sight, under the new ordinance. Boats and trailers in reasonably good condition are excepted and do not have to be so housed.

MANY OF the problems now existing would automatically be cured, Vose said, if combined refuse collection and sanitary landfill disposal were adopted by the city. Meanwhile, he said, the city

Body of Tomah Hostess Found

UNIONVILLE, Mo. — The body of 21-year-old Ann Berry, a stewardess on the ill-fated Continental air liner that crashed just south of the Iowa line Tuesday night, was found Thursday afternoon about a mile from the spot where the fuselage landed.

Miss Berry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Berry of Tomah, Wis., was the last of the 45 dead to be recovered.

Counties covered by the report are Fillmore, Houston, Olmsted, Wabasha and Winona. The stores which reported highest and lowest volume are both located in Fillmore County. Highest sales volume of the group was recorded by the Spring Valley store with total sales of $177,518. Gross profit was 34.6 percent of total volume and net profit was $27,875. With a population of 2,628, Spring Valley is the largest municipality included in the report.

Lowest reported volume is shown by the smallest community represented. Fountain, population 297, recorded $36,473 total business, a gross profit of 36.6 percent and a $3,383 net.

Spring Valley also made the highest contribution to other municipal funds, $42,000, followed by Stewartville, Olmsted County, which did total business of $153,048 and turned over $25,500 for various other funds.

Though it ranked second in total business the Stewartville dispensary reported the greatest dollar volume of net profit, $29,973.

Three Winona county stores are included in the tabulation: Altura, Goodview and St. Charles. Altura's total sales were down last year to $39,170 from

Survey Indicates Residents Want New Garbage System

By FRANK UHLIG
Daily News Staff Writer

Combined collection of refuse and sanitary landfill disposal won the approval of an overwhelming majority of Winonans answering a health department questionnaire published last October, according to Roy Vose, city sanitary inspector.

Vose told a meeting of the City Council committee on health and welfare Thursday night that 83 percent of respondents favored the combined system, 12 percent opposed and 5 percent were undecided. The questionnaire was published in the Daily News Oct. 24, 1961, and asked 12 questions concerning the present method of waste collection and disposal employed by the city. Vose listed results of the inquiry in connection with a report on the city Cleanup Week just past.

A TOTAL OF 408 replies were returned to the city health department, a surprisingly large number, in Vose's opinion, because of the voluntary nature of the sampling.

Further replies indicated dissatisfaction with present collection methods: 325 persons answered "no" and 83 said "yes" to the question "Has service been satisfactory?" One respondent who declared himself in favor of the present system, noted he had complained once about service to Vose but that it had been a "waste of time."

The average number of garbage collections reported by persons answering the questionnaire was below the number called for in the contract between the city and James Keller, who operates the pickup and disposal service at an annual fee of $32,950. Replies showed an average of 1.7 pickups a week in summer months and 1.2 pickups a week in wintertime.

THE CONTRACT with the Keller service specifies three weekly pickups in summer and two each week in winter months. Awarded for a five-year term in 1958, the contract will expire in July 1963. Answers also showed 13% percent of those replying had garbage disposal units in their homes, Vose said.

Present city dumping facilities are now overtaxed and will reach saturation within another year, Vose told the committee. He urged committee backing for the sanitary landfill system, unrestricted collection by the city of all refuse, and abandonment of the present municipal tin can collection.

The landfill method was described by Vose as the answer to the rat infestation problem because all refuse is dumped in excavations, compacted and covered every day with a layer of dirt. It also removes a major site for mosquito breeding, Vose continued, since no exposed containers are left to collect stagnant water.

A prime advantage of the landfill system of refuse disposal, Vose said, is the concurrent improvement of undeveloped property. The system often is used, he said, to transform waste land into high-value property to the benefit of the city generally and surrounding property owners as well.

VOSE SUGGESTED the Council study the 15-acre slough adjoining the Westfield Golf Course as a prime site. By employing the area, he said, a large tract of slough could be reclaimed and put to profitable use, surrounding property values would be raised, and a source of mosquito populations could be eradicated.

It would be necessary to purchase a bulldozer, Vose said, noting that $10,000 already has been budgeted by the Council for future use. Cost of an adequate machine would be about $25,000, the committee was told.

As to objections that may be raised by neighboring residents, Vose said the chief one would probably be the question of rats. An accelerated rat control program should be carried on, he said, but the nightly sealing of waste deposits should serve to discourage the rodents. Odors also are absent under this system, he said.

Scratch Around and You'll Find an Itch

Is the annual outbreak of poison ivy rash hitting epidemic proportions, and unseasonably early at that?

This burning question bemoans suburban dwellers, many of whom have observed the angry red rash on every hand — not to mention other parts of the body.

It's not necessarily so, according to a cross section of doctors: the stinging stuff is always around. Exceptionally hot weather brought fauna and flora, humans and plants, out early this spring. A burst of hilly, picnicking and fishing, inspired by summery temperatures last week, provided plenty of opportunities for exposure, the medics say, and nature took its course.

As suffering ivy leaguers will attest, it's no picnic even though the red skin eruptions may have followed a pleasant outdoor hot-dog and lemonade idyll. Some preventative can be had, though, in the form of shots which lessen sensitivity to the leafy poisons. As a second guess, doctors admonish, the shots are not so good — they should be taken before the fact to be effective.

What sort of first aid is advised? The doctors can answer that one without so much as cracking a medical book: stay away from it. Or if you think you have been exposed, wash with soap and water as soon as possible.

Well, then, if you don't have the shots beforehand, if you get into a poison ivy patch, and if you can't wash it off right away — what then?

Treatment will help some, but mostly, says the medical sages, just grin and wear it. You're a charter member of the smart set.

Eugenie Marks 53rd Birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Eugenie Anderson of Red Wing, Minn., celebrates her 53rd birthday today in the wake of preliminary Senatorial approval of her appointment as minister to Bulgaria.

Mrs. Anderson was approved for the post Thursday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after only brief questioning.

She served as ambassador to Denmark from 1949-53 by appointment of former President Truman. She drew praise before the committee Thursday from Sens. Fulbright and Humphrey.

House Mover Returns, Finds Barn Blown Down

BUTES CREEK, N.C. (AP) — Addison Shreve of Dunn, a house mover, went to a farm near here this week to move a tobacco barn.

He returned to town for more equipment, then back to the farm. He found the barn had been moved — a sudden wind and hail storm had blown it down.

Squirrel Mistakes Golf Balls for Nuts

MONTREAL (AP) — The mystery of the disappearing golf balls on the fourth hole of the Senneville Golf Club has been solved. A squirrel's cache was discovered in a hollow stump just off the fairway. It yielded at least 50 balls.

Motorcyclist Found Guilty

Allen E. Maussner Jr., Winona State College, was found guilty of speeding today by Municipal Judge S. D. J. Brusk.

He had been arrested by police at 1:15 a.m. May 15 on West Broadway between Wilson and Grand streets.

PATROLMEN Rodney J. Polowski and Bruce A. Stanton testified that they had observed Maussner driving a motorcycle south on Main Street at Broadway about 1:15 a.m. May 15.

They saw Maussner turn right (west) on Broadway.

They said Maussner was following a car, that he was about 50 feet behind the car as they followed a half block behind.

For a distance of two blocks (between Huff and Wilson streets) they clocked Maussner at a speed of 45 miles an hour. It was at Wilson Street, patrolmen said, that they put on the red warning light to stop both vehicles.

Both patrolmen concurred that the car and motorcycle were driving at about the same rate of speed during the time they clocked them.

MAUSSNER called Douglas F. Morford, 23, Winona State College, as a witness. Morford said he was driver of the car involved in the incident and that he and Maussner were traveling together. He admitted through cross-examination by Roger P. Brosnahan, assistant city attorney, that he had pleaded guilty to the speeding charge made against him that night.

Maussner took the stand and testified he did not believe the motorcycle he was using could travel at the rate of speed for which he was charged.

There was no light on the speedometer of the motorcycle, Maussner told the court, so he could not be certain at what speed he was traveling. He also said he was not able to keep up with Morford's car as it proceeded down Broadway.

Judge Brusk sentenced him to pay a $25 fine or serve eight days in city jail. Maussner paid the fine.

Charge Dismissed

The charge of assault against Sydney G. Johnstone, 48, 477 Johnson St., was dismissed today by Municipal Judge S. D. J. Brusk.

Mrs. Johnstone, the complaining witness, told Roger P. Brosnahan, assistant city attorney, that she would not testify against her husband. Johnstone had been arrested by police on a citizen's complaint at 1:25 a.m. Thursday at his home.

Avalon Sold For $38,975

The excursion steamer Avalon, once a familiar caller at the port of Winona, will become a permanent attraction of the Louisville, Ky., waterfront following its sale Thursday.

Sold at a bankruptcy auction, the old sternwheeler was purchased by Jefferson County, Ky., for $38,975.

Some of the boat's equipment was sold separately for total bids of $4,850. Included in the list was the calliope, reputed a genuine collector's item, which went to a Cincinnati dealer. He plans to mount it on a trailer for rental use. Radar, chairs, tables and other miscellaneous gear also were sold individually.

The Avalon, which last called here in August 1961, was one of the three remaining excursion steamers on the Mississippi. Others are the President and the Admiral, now operating on lower stretches of the river only.

Another famous pleasure boat, the Capitol, last called here 20 years ago. The Capitol was decommissioned, thereafter, according to Ed Prosser, local excursion promoter, when government regulations barred all but steel hulls from river traffic.

The Volkswagen is the one in black.

These cars look alike to a Volkswagen mechanic. They have the same engine, the same transmission, and the same chassis.

But the one on the bottom got mixed up with an Italian who thought the Volkswagen would make a sexy little runabout: Ghia of Turin.

The car's the VW Karmann Ghia.

Its special body takes so much hand work that Volkswagen farms it out to one of Europe's greatest custom coachworks, Karmann of Osnabrück. Every seam is welded, ground down, filed and sanded by hand. It's been mistaken for everything from a Ferrari to a Lancia. Yet VW parts are all you need. You get the VW's legendary mileage. VW's air-cooled engine. And the famous Volkswagen traction in snow and sand.

Readers Enjoy AP World Spotlight

FOR THE LAST three months, the Winona Sunday News has been running a page of international news titled AP (for Associated Press) World Spotlight.

We have had several good comments about it and now comes the weekly issue of the AP Log, a publication distributed exclusively among Associated Press members and clients, which says this Sunday feature has become firmly established as a fresh, widely welcomed medium of information on world affairs.

No other AP enterprise in years, as a matter of fact, has aroused such enthusiastic response.

AP WORLD SPOTLIGHT, which so many of our readers apparently enjoy, was not a new idea basically. The backgrounding and explaining of foreign news with accent on the offbeat has long been an acknowledged major task. What was new was the packaging of a group of such stories, worthy of special display and promotion, and placing production on an organized basis involving the talents of AP's entire foreign staff.

Moreover, the advent of Spotlight has coincided with much more enterprise by individual newspapers including the Winona Daily and Sunday News, in the field of illuminating and interpretive copy. All this activity represents (1) a crystallizing of editorial ideas long held and discussed by AP, but not heretofore so systematically acted upon—or so marketable—and (2) a stimulus to greater newspaper readership, in hotly competitive times, and a better informed public. Here are a few of the conspicuous examples:

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE inaugurated a new Sunday section—with Spotlight as its keystone—to survey world affairs, industry and business. The Philadelphia Inquirer ran a series of full-page, with color maps, "Areas of Crisis." The Kansas City Star periodically is presenting special sections, illustrated in color, as "Background for Better Understanding." The Copley News Service, set up in 1955 specifically to background and explain foreign news for 15 Copley papers, has been presenting regular special reports.

Gardner Cowles, president and editor of Look, and publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, interviewed Premier Khrushchev in Moscow. Dave Roberts of the Cincinnati Enquirer wrote an 11-part series on Cuba and has made other trips abroad. Lee Meade of the Denver Post reported from Russia. Gerald Clark of the Montreal Star has visited Cuba twice in 12 months. Happily, AP and this newspaper generally have benefited, too, from this enterprise.

QUALITY AND variety have been prominent in Spotlight's success. The AP's foreign staff has responded enthusiastically; more than 50 men in 41 cities have been represented in the production to date. As to variety, subjects have ranged from troubles of the Alliance for Progress to the quality of bread in Poland, from the economic troubles of Indonesia to the popularity of beauty parlors in Hungary.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERP

A carnival performer was aboard an Ohio train when the conductor asked, "What are you carrying in that wicker basket?" "Pigeons," said the performer. "I thought so," said the conductor. "You can't ride with them in here. Rules specifically forbid pigeons in passenger cars."

The performer's plea that these were specially trained pigeons availed him naught, so he reluctantly pried open the car window—no mean feat by itself—and eased the pigeons out.

"Okay, I hope you're satisfied now," said the performer to the conductor, "but believe me, your superiors are going to hear about this when the train gets to Cleveland."

"Cleveland?" repeated the conductor. "This train goes to Cincinnati."

"Holy smoke," exclaimed the performer. Then he leaned out of the window and hollered to his vanishing pigeons. "Hey, fellows! Cincinnati, CINCINNATI!"

"A kid is the last container of a genuine sense of humor," maintains Dr. Seuss, author of the all-conquering "The Cat in the Hat." He continues, "This sense of humor disappears as the kid gets older, and learns to laugh only according to the way the boss, society, politics, or race want him to. Then he becomes an adult. And an adult is an obsolete child."

If your brother sins against you, go and tell him his fault, between you and him alone. Matthew 18:15.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

Congressman Has Own Medicare Bill

By SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER

Ohio Cong. Frank Bow's proposal dealing with the medical problems of the aged is the most enlightened among those offered.

The Bow plan permits a direct federal-income-tax credit of up to $125 for those persons 65 or over who purchase private insurance.

As Cong. Bow describes his plan, "Unlike other proposals, it is completely voluntary. It does not require action by state legislatures. It contains no means test. It does not discriminate. It is a true, free-enterprise plan to help Americans take care of themselves."

The idea of tax credit to encourage individual thrift and responsibility is a counterattack on federal-government spending that we are apt to see applied more frequently in many areas. In fact, it was a suggestion I offered many times during the debates on federal aid to education.

The plan I offered at that time would have allowed a tax credit of up to $100 for homeowners who paid local school taxes. The tax credit was based on the amount of school tax paid by the homeowner, and it would have placed this money right back in his pocket where it would do the most good for the individual community. It would have provided the state and city with a tax source to be drawn on to meet community problems, whether they be schoolrooms, teachers' salaries, fire protection or streets.

THE PROPOSAL was defeated, but it highlighted the fact that federal aid for education advocates were more interested in federal control than in allowing states and school districts the opportunity to tackle their own problems.

The important feature of the Bow plan is that it provides tax incentives for individual provision of medical care and insurance for older people without injecting the federal government into the administration of medical care.

Cong. Bow's proposal offers a number of incentives which deserve consideration. It encourages those who can afford it to provide their own insurance protection, or to provide it for their elderly relatives, by offering a $125-tax credit to be subtracted from the income tax an individual owes. It provides the same incentive to employers who provide health insurance for their retired employees.

ACTUALLY, IT is possible to carry through this line of thinking under our present tax system. It is possible under plans approved by the Internal Revenue Service for a corporation to engage in what is called a profit-sharing retirement plan that can insure income to a retired person over 65 in an amount far greater than any federal plan that has been offered.

There is, I feel, also a need for exploring the means by which an individual of any age could be given tax credit for medical bills assumed during the tax year.

We could extend this same broadened tax inducement in the field of corporate or individual donations to encourage more giving to churches. This would enable churches to build homes for aged persons who no longer have children or who have no means of support other than dependency on the church.

THE ARGUMENT will be advanced by proponents of federal medical care that the proposals I have mentioned would take too much money out of the general fund of the treasury. True, it would remove some money, perhaps $2-$3 billion a year, but I suggest it would be far better and far less costly to the people than their having ultimately to foot a $10-$20-billion bill, and possibly more.

The real challenge to those who express a genuine interest in our aged and, in fact, in the welfare of all our citizens is whether they are genuinely interested in extending this help or whether they are interested only in centralizing further control over our lives in some bureau in Washington.

If their real concern is help, and I must assume that it is, then liberals should join conservatives in supporting the approaches I have outlined.

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Chinese Starvation Reported in Detail

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — This column has examined grim, secret reports to the central intelligence agency from inside Red China, describing the cruel conditions which have driven hordes of desperately hungry Chinese to storm the gates of Hong Kong.

The Communists once boasted that they had rid China of the shame of beggars and bandits. But now begging and crime are the worst in China's history. Goaded by hunger, men, women and children steal from their neighbors, raid market stalls, roam the countryside looking for unguarded vegetable patches.

Those who flee to Hong Kong, already teeming with more than 1,000,000 refugees, can no longer get in. In Berlin, the Reds built a wall to keep the refugees in. At Hong Kong, the British have thrown up barbed wire to keep the refugees out.

An estimated 40,000 refugees, seeking food and freedom, have been turned back by British barbed wire and bayonets during the past few weeks. The personal heartbreak has been pathetic.

Here are typical conditions described in the CIA reports:

From Foochow: "Recently, suicide cases have occurred every day. In some cases, whole families jumped into the river together to end their lives. One was the case of a mother who jumped into the river with her three children because her husband had tuberculosis and was not able to work. As a result of his unemployment, the wife had no rice to feed her children."

"MEAT AND fish have not been seen for three years. Several persons died recently from stomach hemorrhages caused from eating rice bran. Because of this, it was forbidden to eat rice bran. A three-layer cake made from sweet potato leaves, roots, and pig fodder cost .65 yuan. Nine out of ten persons were suffering from the swelling disease (dropsy). Only the aged and children could go to the free markets to make purchases. Cadres (Communist agitators) would be criticized and attacked if they should visit the free markets."

From Swatow: "Two cases of food-snatching which occurred in the central market of Swatow were personally witnessed by the informant. In one instance, a man, apparently about 30 years old, snatched several boiled eggs from a basket carried by a child who had brought them to the market for sale. The child and several onlookers gave chase. The egg-snatcher crammed the eggs in his mouth while he ran and finally eluded his pursuers. On another occasion, a man snatched a steamed fish from a fish stall in the market. He immediately put the fish in his mouth and ran."

"THERE ARE many cases of theft around the first of each month when the rations are issued. Often, the burglars leave money in the rice containers to show that they are stealing the rice only from necessity."

"Formerly, children were often sent to draw the family rice ration, but so many of them were robbed on their way home that this practice has been largely discontinued. Even adults are often stopped by groups who either beg for some of their rice, try to force them to sell it, or steal it and throw them a wad of yuan notes in exchange. These groups sometimes include militia or low-level Chinese Communist cadres."

From Chao An: "Everyone is required to produce two piculs of fertilizer per month per person (the term fertilizer means anything that is used to improve the rice fields, such as nightsoil or fresh tonsol). Since the people can produce very little nightsoil because of their poor diet, they are obliged to dig up fresh dirt and submit it to the authorities. Large holes are seen throughout the area, and people have been forced to go to faraway hillsides to dig dirt."

FROM FENG HUANG Commune: "Foully raising was common in the families of Communist cadres, but not among the average commune members. More of the commune members were raising geese since these could be fed on grass. Moreover, geese made a great deal of noise when strangers approached and were not so likely to be stolen."

"There were five cows in the village. One person was assigned to each cow. The five cowherds were people who had been condemned as 'landlords' or 'rich farmers.' Cowherding was the lowest work in the commune and commanded the lowest number of work points. When a cow became slightly ill, it was their practice to report it seriously ill. Killing of the production brigade and the commune headquarters, based on the recommendation of the production team. To make the recommendation, the team held a meeting to obtain a majority ruling. Everyone voted to have the 'seriously ill' cow slaughtered so they could get some of the beef."

ONE MAN who is determined to do something about Chinese suffering is David Lee of Washington, D.C., a Chinese-American builder, who has just returned from Hong Kong burning with indignation over the refugees' plight.

He has been knocking on State Department doors, trying to arrange food for the starving Chinese. Warning that hungry men are angry, desperate men, Lee pleaded that it is morally wrong, economically wasteful, and politically dangerous to pile up vast quantities of food inside the USA in a world of hunger.

He also called upon Chinese Ambassador T. F. Tsiang, who suggested that American food surpluses could be used to feed not only the refugees but those who have been left behind.

The ambassador gave his personal opinion that the Chinese Nationalists would be willing to air-drop American food parcels behind the bamboo curtain. The parcels should be clearly marked, he suggested, as gift food from the American people.

Byrd Objects To Withholding

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — A Democratic senator who has spent the major part of his career of nearly 30 years in Congress studying taxes and finance has come out against two important provisions of the Kennedy administration's tax bill — the withholding of taxes on dividends and interest, and the proposed 7 or 8 per cent credit on new machinery and equipment.

The senator is Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, chairman of the Finance Committee, which has just finished comprehensive hearings on the bill.

Over the weekend the position taken by Sen. Byrd was briefly reported. But the exact words he used in announcing his differences with President Kennedy are significant and worthy of careful examination by both sides in the controversy. He said:

"I oppose enactment of the withholding proposal at this time for numerous reasons including:

"1. Withholding taxes on interest and dividends cannot be compared with withholding taxes on salaries and wages. Its administration would be terribly complex, if not impracticable and unworkable.

"2. It would, by its inherent deficiencies, overtax people for extended periods, and impose hardship or inconvenience not only on taxpayers but also on institutions and businesses used by the government to collect the taxes.

"3. Respect for our tax system must be maintained. It is necessarily complex enough. Unnecessary confusion must be avoided. The agitating characteristics of this proposal are already clear from public reaction. Tax evasion cannot be condoned, but this withholding proposal should be enacted only as a last resort.

"4. AN ALTERNATIVE is available, and it should first be given full trial. The Internal Revenue Service is now assigning numbers to taxpayers to eliminate identification difficulties, and at the same time it is installing computers to show currently what taxpayers owe the government and vice versa. This combination should and will provide information for effective curtailment of tax evasion."

Now, the foregoing is directly opposite to some of the statements made by President Kennedy at his press conferences recently, but it does represent a rapidly developing sentiment among members of both parties in the Senate.

The administration has stressed the fact that some people evade taxes, but it has ignored the practical difficulties that face those honest citizens who would be unlawfully deprived of the use of their income that is really not due as taxes but would be withheld by corporations and savings banks as a result of new laws compelling such steps. It is the problem of "overwithholding" that really has caused the furor. Likewise, the alternative plan of helping tax collection through a wider system of informational reporting to the government of payments of interest and dividends would seem to be adequate for the treasury's purposes.

WHAT IS perhaps just as significant in Sen. Byrd's remarkable statement is his argument against the so-called incentive credit to which the administration has pointed as an example of its friendliness toward business.

The Virginia senator says he opposes the incentive credit also "for numerous reasons," including the following:

"1. It is wrong in principle. It is in the nature of a government payment before the fact instead of a credit for an accomplished fact."

"2. It is a subsidy in the nature of a windfall to be given to businesses which comply with a government policy."

"3. It is discriminatory in its application among various businesses, even among those similar in kind. Incentive is a stated purpose of the proposal, but it would be retroactive to last Jan. 1, and it is difficult to understand how the provisions would be an incentive for investments made before it is enacted. It would be a bonanza for certain corporations which would reach $500 million."

"4. An alternative is available. The government has the authority, and belatedly is now taking action to modernize internal revenue regulations to provide realistic depreciation credit for plant and equipment."

DESPISE ALL the talk of what the investment credit plan would do. Sen. Byrd points out that a recent McGraw-Hill survey found the investment credit would boost investments by only about one percent, or $300 million. There would be windfalls by which some corporations would gain a great deal. While U. S. Steel Corporation, for instance, might get a credit of from $5 to $6 million, a different company in another field might receive a $350-million credit in a single year. This is why the measure is attacked as "discriminatory."

Most businessmen also would prefer a permanent system and not a plan that can at any time be revoked, since it is designed primarily as an anti-recession measure. The

Calories Count in Reducing

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Letters from readers continue to pour in about the calorie notion that "calories don't count" in reducing programs.

Says one, "In my office, half a dozen people are following an oil theory, taking it daily and eating a high protein diet. They are frying everything in safflower oil. Do you think this is valid?"—B. M."

And a raft of others. I've already written in the column that calories DO count, but this is a sn't, obviously, satisfied many readers.

All right, here we go. There are many obvious and perniciously true rules of life. If you spend more than you earn, you go into debt. If you don't get enough sleep, you're tired and dull. If you hate people, you'll reap hate—and the same applies to being friendly. You reap friendliness.

Eat more than you use up, and you acquire fat; eat less than you use up, and you burn up some fat.

Motivation is important in dieting. If you want to lose weight urgently enough, you can. But you can't do it by saying, "Of course I want to lose weight but I can't stop eating."

Therefore all sorts of gimmicks have been devised to help people of feeble determination to reduce. The "Hollywood diets" and "the 10-day diets" and all the rest of the quackeries are designed so that dieters can see some results, can stick to the diet long enough to get rid of some poundage—after which all these half-starved people start eating again, and put the pounds back on.

THEN ALONG came another diet, an experiment based on making people eat a whole lot of protein but not much else. It sounded wonderful: "Eat all the meat you want." That's the sort of thing that appeals to people who like to eat. Follow me?

Well, the new fad is a variation of "DuPont experiment." Stuff people with protein (they can tolerate only about so much, and then they rebel), and then fill 'em up with fats (vegetable fats this time, which seems all right to me), and strictly limit other things, especially sugars and starches which are tasty but fattening, and what happens?

They consume fewer calories! Told that they can "eat all they want" of protein and fat, they think it sounds like paradise.

IT'S ONLY when they are up to their ears in protein and fats, and start yearning for a jelly sandwich or a slab of pie, cream in their coffee and a fudge sundae, that they recognize the new "miracle" as just another way of tricking themselves into eating less.

managers of America's enterprises like to plan their expansion or modernization over a five or ten-year period. The viewpoint expressed by Sen. Byrd is unquestionably upheld by the business world today.

It wasn't Dad who burned the midnight oil . . . or crammed for exams . . . or struggled with term papers . . . or won a letter in baseball . . . or a prize in home economics.

Dad just wrote the checks . . . and the encouraging letters . . . and boasted to the office force about his "kids" in school.

But this is really Dad's graduation. For he planned this day many years ago. And all these years he has struggled to give his boy and girl the kind of an education he never had.

Something else he has given them—something he did have; a sound Christian faith, manifested in loyal devotion to his Church's worship and work.

Better than a diploma is Dad's reward today; the reverent, joyous certainty that, not only in their education, but equally in their spiritual development, he has recognized the needs of his children . . . and has seen them through.

Are you planning your children's future—every Sunday?

What Do You Believe?

By GARY EVANS
Daily News Church Editor

"If there were one word to be chosen that would clearly distinguish the Presbyterian church from the other Protestant churches I would think the word would be discipline," the Rev. William T. King, the first minister to be interviewed, commented.

"When I speak of discipline, however, I don't mean the hand-slapping kind which the word has come to connote," he continued. "Rather I mean it in its original sense as a derivative of discipline meaning one who follows and is taught."

"The Presbyterian church is not unique in its dedication to follow Christ," he said. "But it does, to a degree, stand apart from other Protestant churches in its emphasis upon education. The confession of faith of the Christian is that he believes that Jesus Christ is his Lord and Saviour. But this faith must seek understanding and this is the task of discipline."

The concern for the church is exemplified by the church building itself, he said. There was a choice when the building was erected whether to construct a sanctuary or church school. The latter was chosen and the congregation has elected to wait until a future date to construct a sanctuary.

Discipline, while it is in some ways unique to the Presbyterian church, brings with it certain problems.

THE CHIEF problem is the means of communication of the Word of God. Since Jesus Christ is the Word of God, the Word is a human being rather than a statement. This is the great difficulty for the Presbyterian church cannot function simply as an academic instructor along these lines, he said.

"It must cause the people to realize the change in their lives and help them to understand their daily living in the light of the promises of God. Discipline then becomes much more difficult than imparting wisdom, than class room instruction," Rev. King continued. It involves guiding people to understand what they already believe so that it changes their understanding of their relationship to God and to their fellow man.

"This is the problem and the Presbyterian church has found no clear cut answers to it," he stated. "This is our struggle."

The Presbyterians are different from many other Protestant denominations in their understanding of the sacraments. It is the contention of the church that Baptism and the Lord's Supper are necessary for the church to proclaim the Word of God, but that they are not necessary for salvation by God.

"It is often said that Presbyterians believe in predestination," Rev. King said. "And this is quite true. However, the meaning of predestination is somewhat different from what might be expected. Actually this is a confession of faith which Presbyterians make saying that apart from the grace of God they could not hope for salvation."

"This is quite different from saying that God has already decided who is to be saved and who is to be damned," he continued. "The latter statement might well

An Inquiry Series

Editor's note: Possibly the question asked of clergy-men most frequently is — "How does your church differ in respect to churches of other denominations?" Each church has a unique aspect, no matter how closely its doctrines and beliefs parallel churches of other faiths.

This story is the first in a series that will attempt to answer the questions.

be true but this is God's affair not ours."

WHENEVER predestination is lifted from the context of a confession of faith it becomes distorted and means something quite different from what it was originally intended to mean. Unfortunately the distortion is better known than the proper meaning, he continued.

The Presbyterian government is the one after which the government of the United States is patterned, he said. It seeks to establish the judicial power in representative groups rather than in individuals. It allows the majority to rule but the minority to have the right to protest. Both pastors and laymen hold office in these judicial bodies and have equal voting power.

Evanger to Mark 90th Anniversary

INDEPENDENCE, Wis. (Special)—The 90th anniversary of one of Buffalo County's oldest church buildings will be celebrated by members of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, near Gilmanston and Independence, Sunday.

The tall, white edifice, commonly known as the Hill Church, is visible for about five miles from the valleys it overlooks. It was built in 1872 by Scandinavian pioneers and is surrounded by a cemetery where one tombstone records one man's birth as 1797.

THE REV. Thomas J. Lee, Menomonie, will be the guest speaker at the 10:30 a.m. worship service. The only member of the church to become an ordained minister, he served as a missionary in China many years.

Guest speaker at the 2 p.m. service will be the Rev. O. C. Aune, Colfax, who served the congregation for 43 years until his retirement in 1939.

Rev. Aune is remembered by older residents of the area for training wild horses as he drove them on his circuit of three area churches during his early pastorate.

He resided at Osseo and served a congregation there in addition to those at Kings Valley and Evanger. During the early years of his pastorate at Evanger he was forced to stay in the area all weekend as the round trip of more than 50 miles by horse took many hours.

During his long service at Evanger Rev. Aune performed religious rites for three generations of member families. He married Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Johnson, baptized and confirmed their six children, married their four daughters and baptized several grandchildren.

SEVEN PASTORS have served Evanger since it was organized in 1871. They are: P. J. Solberg, 1871-74; Sever Benntzen, 1874-85; H. M. Hjerlaas, 1885-94; O. H. Elstad, 1894-1907; J. C. Hjelmervik, 1907-16; O. C. Aune, 1916-59, and Richard Buege.

Worship services were conducted in the Norwegian language until the early 1920s. The altar and pulpit in the church have been in use for 75 years; the baptismal font was hand made by Rev. Hjerlaas and has been used 80 years.

The church was rededicated in 1950 after a basement was dug and a new dining area and kitchen built. The church seats about 150.

Oldest member of the congregation is Mrs. Thea Nelson, 90, now residing at Strum, Wis. Her husband, Henry Norby, Mrs. Lena Johnson, Mrs. Mary Fimreite, and Mrs. Julia Bjorge, other older members all about 85, recall worshipping on wooden benches in the early years of the church.

REV. BUEGE, was born Sept. 1, 1929, in Surgeon Bay, Wis. He attended the Christian day school of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Algoma, Wis., and graduated in 1946.

Following his graduation from high school he worked in the Algoma plywood factory one year. In the fall of 1947 he entered River Falls State College to study agriculture. After one year he returned to Algoma and continued to farm as he had done during his high school years while attending high school.

In the fall of 1949 he began to study for the ministry at Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill. During his senior year at Concordia he transferred to the Lutheran Seminary, Thilfville, Wis., and graduated June 2, 1955.

He was ordained into the Lutheran ministry June 2, 1955. He began to serve the Evangelical Lutheran congregation in October of 1959 following the retirement of Rev. Aune. He was installed as pastor of Evanger on June 19, 1960.

Evanger has a baptized membership of 160 and 114 confirmed members.

OFFICERS of the church are: Iner Bjorge, president; Clarence Johnson, vice president; Marvin Fimreite, trustee; Mrs. Allard Norby, secretary; Mrs. Terrance Nelson, financial secretary, and Mrs. George Norby, treasurer.

Mrs. Herman Linberg is superintendent of the 33 Sunday school students. Mrs. Lyman Peterson is the organist.

Mrs. Peterson heads the ladies aid as president. Other officers are: Mrs. Joseph Paulson, vice president; Mrs. Allard Norby, secretary, and Mrs. Oscar Fimreite, treasurer.

The anniversary celebration is open to the public. The ladies aid will serve dinner at noon.

Methodists Plan Caravan to Visit Rural Parishes

The Rev. E. Clayton Burgess, pastor of Central Methodist Church, is helping send a bishop on a bus ride as a part of National Rural Life Sunday, to be celebrated in the Winona area churches Sunday.

Bishop T. Otto Nall, head of Minnesota's 398 Methodist churches, will join 300 persons on a 150-mile rural life caravan to survey the 10-church Central Minnesota Group Ministry, a unique experiment in providing increasingly more effective program and leadership to small rural churches.

Rev. Burgess is a member of the Minnesota Methodist town and country commission which laid plans for the group ministry's start in the fall of 1961.

Today four ministers are effectively serving 1,163 members in a six-county area located 40-60 miles north of the Twin Cities.

Recent surveys indicate a weakening of the smaller churches, and since five churches of the parish have less than 50 members, results of this project will have implications for some churches in the Southeastern Minnesota area.

Sunday's caravan begins with a 10 a.m. worship service at Milaca Methodist Church. From there the tour will proceed with 10-minute inspection stops at each of the parish churches and a longer stop at Princeton for lunch.

WHITEHALL, Wis. (Special)—Grain aphids and greenbugs in grain fields have been reported by farmers in the Trempealeau and Centerville areas of Trempealeau County, according to Peter Bieri, Trempealeau County agent.

Bieri said greenbugs and grain aphids did extensive damage to grain fields in 1959 and 1960. He urged farmers to watch their fields for the pests and spray if infestation becomes extensive.

Wheat Penalty Set At $1.59 a Bushel

PRESTON, Minn. — The marketing quota penalty rate on 1962-crop "excess" wheat production has been set at $1.59 per bushel, Ray Johnson, Fillmore County ASCS committee chairman, reported.

This compares with a 1961-crop wheat penalty rate of $1.08 per bushel.

Under the 1962 wheat quota program, the marketing quota penalty on excess wheat is required by law to be set at 65 percent of parity as of May 1 of the crop year. In previous years, the penalty rate was 45 percent of parity.

Johnson stressed that some farms with 15 acres or less of wheat may be subject to quota penalties on their wheat production this year as a result of changes in the law. Producers who have excess wheat acreage have until June 30 to reduce their acreage in order to avoid a marketing quota penalty.

Arcadian Helps Map Broiler Marketing Plan

ARCADIA, Wis. — The National Broiler Advisory Committee has nearly completed revising modifications to the proposed marketing order programs, Robert Boland, head of the feed department of A-G Cooperative here explained.

Boland was one of 35 representatives from 25 states who met recently to discuss broiler marketing problems in Washington, D.C. He will attend another meeting in Washington on Monday.

He said that the administration had asked men in his industry throughout the country to shape their own program. Several meetings already have been held.

The Department of Agriculture will take the advisory committee proposals and draft a law which will be sent to Congress for approval.

Following are modifications proposed at the last meeting:

Growers in a period of volume regulations (five production controls) would be given an allocation of chicks based on the same corresponding period of the previous year.

Hatcheries would be allowed to produce during periods of regulations a volume based on the corresponding period for the previous year.

Independent hatcheries and/or growers would be free to trade with whomever they desire during the period of volume regulations.

However, the relationship of contract growers and contractor would remain fixed during periods of volume regulations. When volume regulations were not in effect even though other provisions of the proposed program were, all parties would be free to do business as usual.

Cut Alfalfa Early That's Test Results

LEWISTON, Minn.—Cutting alfalfa in early bloom will reap extra profits for farmers with forage-consuming livestock, according to Oliver Strand, Winona County agent.

Higher feeding value and larger amounts eaten by livestock are the major reasons for cutting alfalfa in early bloom. Better quality and more digestible feed add up to more profit from the farm business.

EARLY CUTTING of the first crop will allow the second crop to get started before moisture supplies are depleted. Protein content with three early cuttings is approximately 6 percent higher than with two late cuttings, according to Minnesota and Wisconsin experiments. A two-year time and frequency experiment in hay cutting has been completed on the Winona County farm of Milton Thiel, Garvin Heights.

One acre of alfalfa will provide approximately 330 more pounds of protein from three early cuttings, compared with two late cuttings. Considering yields 3 to 3½ tons per acre, this means that $25 to $30 less protein will have to be purchased on a per acre basis in a livestock operation when three early cuttings are used.

For example, if 20 acres of alfalfa are harvested annually $500 to $600 less protein supplement would have to be purchased. Cost of putting up a third crop is from $4 to $5 per acre.

ON 20 ACRES, this means net returns could amount to $400 to $500 from three-time early cutting.

Current market prices of 40 percent protein content soybean meal are used in making this comparison.

The increased quality and digestibility of the alfalfa add up to increased returns from the farm business.

New Type Terracing Used

"The rainfall that a farmer gets during the year is his quota. It's up to him to make the most of it," William Sillman, Winona County SCS work unit conservationist, explained in connection with a type of field terracing being introduced locally.

Construction using this new technique in soil conservation practices was completed recently on the John Waldo farm, located about 2 1/2 miles southwest of Wadena. Sillman admits there may be others like it in the general area, but none in Winona County.

What makes the difference between new and old methods? First, the terraces are parallel. In the past, terraces were built to conform closely to the natural contour of the sloped area. Where the slopes were steep the terraces tended to bunch together, where they were relatively flat the terrace would spread out.

AS A RESULT farmers found that working the land with modern farm machinery was difficult, for example in cultivating. Modern tractor cultivators need consistently sloping or level ground to be effective. A terrace that would suddenly appear under one set of shovels often would upset the entire operation.

There is another difference between terracing as it has been done and as it actually was done on Waldo's farm. Soil conservationists call it the cut-and-fill technique.

If farmers are to keep a maximum amount of the rain that falls on their land, they must find ways to ease the rain off the fields, keeping as much of the moisture as possible. All terracing projects do this to an extent, but this one does it better, Sillman says.

Rather than directing the rain that runs off a hillside only as far as the valley in the normal contour of a hilly area, the new terraces take the water through the valley and over the crest of the next hill. This only can be done with the cut-and-fill process.

USING A TYPE of scraper ordinarily associated with highway construction, the earth is cut out from high areas and filled into low areas. The land along which the terraces follow then becomes relatively level. Water, seeking its own level, will slowly move across the field to a lower level—even across what normally would be a valley.

Sillman conceded that this technique in terracing is somewhat more expensive.

He estimated that the total cost of Howard's project (1,100 feet of terraces) would be about $440—or about four cents a foot. This is about 10-15 percent higher than it would have been using standard techniques. The government, however, pays 70 percent through a cost-sharing program.

Can this new conservation method be applied to all fields? Sillman explained that it could be used on any land which had 10 percent or less slope. Different techniques would be used on sharply sloping ground.

KEEPING the rainfall on the fields is, of course, most important to the farmer. Also important is the ease with which he can use modern farm machinery. But Sillman pointed to other advantages. Wildlife will have a better chance for survival. Erosion will be cut down. Farmers living in valleys, are less in danger of flooding if men tilling the soil above have done their job. "This sort of thing has multi-purpose benefits," he said.

Waldo, incidentally, had more work done than the terracing job itself. He cleaned out two of his terrace outlets and soon will build a watering pond into which the run-off will flow before leaving his farm.

Sillman said with a satisfied grin, "There won't be much water leaving this farm." Howard nodded agreement.

Trempealeau Co. Plat Book Arrives

WHITEHALL, Wis. (Special) — The Trempealeau County farm plat books have arrived at the county extension office, according to Trempealeau County 4-H club agent, Roy Shanklin.

The books, sponsored by the county 4-H clubs, are available at the extension office or through the 4-H leaders. They have an index listing all farm owners in the county and will be sold at $3 a piece.

CUT AND FILL . . . The difference between past and present techniques in field terracing is in the earth mover in the background. It cuts land, scrapes it into its huge belly and moves it to another area. High areas on a section of hilly land are cut down and filled into lower, depression areas. The cut shown here is the beginning of a terrace. It later will be broadened and cut into a V-pattern by a motor patrol. Terraces will be about 14 feet wide. Formerly, they would have been 8 to 10 feet wide. Distance between terraces on the field is approximately 100 feet. They become closer together as the slope becomes steeper — but always are parallel.

HAS SHOP AT 83

Smithy Recalls Busy Horseshoeing Days

MONDOVI, Wis. (Special) — Shoeing horses, sharpening plow shares and repairing wooden wagon wheels are memories today for 83-year-old Joseph I. Wulff, Mondovi, who has worked as a blacksmith here more than a half-century.

Wulff's long career began in 1899, when he started working for and learning the blacksmith trade in the shop of Harry Gunerson at Gilmanston.

In 1901 he came to Mondovi and started working in the John Melrose shop. He soon bought one of the first blacksmith shops in Mondovi. It had been established by George and Jacob Canar about 1875.

He worked in the building more than 20 years, later remodeling it so it could hold seven teams of horses and four forges. He employed two men and they often shod 24 teams a day.

Wulff sold his business in Mondovi and moved to a farm in the Town of Naples, where he established another shop.

HE DID much of the horseshoeing for Walter L. Houser, Mondovi, Wisconsin secretary of state who displayed horses throughout the state at special exhibitions at Chicago. Wulff made a special patterned shoe for Houser's Clydesdales.

The veteran blacksmith was once offered one of the first automobile dealerships in Mondovi, but turned it down because he "never had much time for cars."

Wulff smiles when he recalls the variety of work he has done in blacksmith shops. In addition to the regular jobs, he's doctored horses for sore hocks and was once asked to repair a broken down merry-go-round.

"Water — The Stream of Life" is the theme of Soil Stewardship Week May 27-June 3. It also is the subject of an article distributed by an agency of the National Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts. Following is a condensed version of the article:

In the era of synthetic substitutes and success symbols, man has yet to devise an adequate substitute for water. Water can be so abundant that it invites waste; yet it can be so scarce that it sets man against man in deadly conflict for its vital uses. It can produce crops, trees and grass, yet it can also produce the ugliness of raw gullies which cut into an unprotected countryside.

In its infinite variety, water is a thirst quenching drink for the children of Atlanta, a cooling accessory for the steel mills of Ohio and vital irrigation for sun-drenched fields of Arizona. Water is a miraculous gift of God given to us for our refreshment and endless use, but our neglect can waste, misuse and turn it into offensive sewers of pollution. Water tests our sense of responsibility to God and man. It demands our self-discipline, our imagination, our sense of stewardship.

year of blacksmithing in Hale Town, Trempealeau County.

WULF and his wife, the former Carrie Odegard, have been married nearly 57 years. They have two children, Martin and Mrs. Myron Elde, both of Mondovi; 15 grandchildren, and 16 great-grandchildren.

In 1943 Wulff and his wife moved back to Mondovi, but he drove out to his farm blacksmith shop nearly every day until a few years ago. He now has a small shop at his home where he makes tools and hunting equipment.

The last blacksmith left in Mondovi who has shodded horses says he has never regretted becoming a smithy. "I've liked everything about it."

Let's Get Growing

By A. F. SHIRA

Some Reminders

It seems as though there is always something for the gardener to do, some things that appear to demand immediate attention. If this were not so, it might cause a feeling of unrest. Then, too, there would be no opportunities for procrastination and, through our long experience in gardening, this has been found to be both a relaxation and at times a pleasure, as well.

If there are weeds to eradicate, a partial job may be done today and the balance left for the morning, knowing full well that another day's growth will add to the labor, or a rain may necessitate the postponement a few days longer and increase the work.

Perhaps, procrastination should not be considered the same as laziness for in the case of the former the intentions may be good, but we just fail to act. In the case of laziness, we just seem to lay down on the job and accomplish little, though we may make half-hearted efforts. But whether procrastination or laziness, the

Get Those Young Weeds, Agent Says

WHITEHALL, Wis. (Special) — One thing about gardening that everyone knows is that weeds always will grow. Peter Bieri, Trempealeau County agent, has a number of simple rules that apply in weed control.

First, he suggests, do a thorough job of soil preparation immediately before planting. Cultivate between rows right after setting plants, or as soon as seeded crops come up. This kills small weeds before they are actually large enough to become well established.

Cultivate or stir soil about one inch deep around plants and between rows once a week and as soon as the soil can be worked after each rain. Never let weeds go to seed in or around the garden plot. Keep after them as the summer progresses.

It is an established fact that a good crop of clean fruit cannot be obtained without an effective spray program. The same is true of weeds which should be dusted or sprayed when they are about six inches tall and every ten days thereafter until the spikes begin to form. This is for the control of thrips which are so destructive of these beautiful flowers. And, of course, all rose growers know the importance of a dusting or spraying schedule.

A group of 131 third grade pupils from Central Elementary, Madison and Washington-Kosciusko schools today went on a field trip to La Crosse, with a stop at the Emil Lieber Otter Sanctuary at Lamolite.

Accompanied by five teachers, the children were in two groups. One left Winona by train and returned by bus, the other went to La Crosse by bus and returned on an afternoon train.

At La Crosse they visited Pettibone Park and the zoo. Children later will make booklets with illustrated stories about the trip.

Teachers who planned the trip and accompanied the students were Miss Elsie Sartell, Central Elementary; Miss Lucille Dolan and Miss Grace McLeod, Madison, and Mrs. Grace Belville and Mrs. Annabelle Kusinski, Washington-Kosciusko.

SHOWERS DUE Over Weekend; Start Tonight

Near seasonal temperatures and scattered showers sum up the weather picture for the weekend. Considerable cloudiness with occasional showers and a few thunderstorms are predicted for tonight and Saturday. It'll be a little warmer tonight and Saturday's high will be about the same as this afternoon, says the weatherman.

A LOW OF 48-55 is seen for tonight and a high of 70-78 for Saturday. Occasional showers and thunderstorms will dot the area Sunday with little temperature change.

Even the extended forecast, predictions for the next five days, indicate that temperatures will remain near normal but that precipitation will average up to an inch or more as occasional showers and thunderstorms mainly tonight and Saturday and periodically for the rest of the time.

Highest temperature in Winona Thursday was 72. During the night the thermometer dropped to a chilly 49. It was 53 at 7 a.m. and 64 at noon.

A YEAR AGO today the Winona high was 78 and the low 53 with 1.6 of an inch of rain. The all-time high for May 25 was 91 in 1911 and the low for the day 34 in 1925. The mean for the past 24 hours was 60. Normal for this day is 64.

Lowest reading in the state this morning was a chilly 34 at Bemidji. International Falls was close with 35 and Duluth 37.

At Rochester the low today was 47 after a Thursday high of 70 and La Crosse posted figures of 44 and 68 for the same times.

THE HEAVY rains of the past week are bringing high water into the Mississippi River with a crest of 11 feet indicated at Red Wing on Wednesday and 13 feet at Lake City on Thursday.

The Winona stage, 8.5 today, was slated to go to 8.7 Saturday and 8.8 Sunday and Monday. At Durand the crest was expected tonight at 8.3. All expected crests are well below the flood stages.

The Winona peak this spring was 11.7 on April 15.

State College Heating Bids Total $93,981

Apparent low bids totaling $93,981 for expansion of Winona State College heating plant facilities were opened at St. Paul Thursday afternoon by A. O. Vesey, director, Division of Procurement, State Department of Administration.

Dr. Nels Minne, college president who attended the opening, said apparent low bidders were: General construction, P. Earl Schwab, Winona, $30,935; electrical, John P. Mader, La Crosse, $16,220; and mechanical, Winona Plumbing Co., $46,826.

Work will involve extension of tunnel and service lines and, as part of the mechanical bid, installation of a small boiler in the present two-boiler plant. It will be in the east end.

CONTRACTS ARE expected to be awarded soon. Work is expected to be finished by the start of the college year in September.

Also attending the bid opening was Harold O. Murck, college business manager.

Other bidders follow: General—WMC, Inc., Winona, $32,290; and H. S. Dresser, Winona, $34,678. Electrical—Foster Electric Co., Rochester, $18,270; and Neumann Electric Co., La Crosse, $19,700. Mechanical — Frank O'Laughlin Plumbing and Heating Co., Winona, $51,440; H. R. Nichols Co., St. Paul, $50,600; Pioneer Power Co., St. Paul, $52,800; Fuel Economy Co., St. Paul, $58,800; C. A. Hooper Co., Madison, Wis., $58,885; and American Plumbing Co., Winona, $72,727.

THE ORIGINAL heating plant project cost $420,000. Funds for the original project and the expansion came from a $700,000 appropriation made by the legislature in 1959 for the heating plant. The plant went into operation last October. At that time the plant had two boilers and 1,300 feet of tunnel for steam, electric and telephone lines. It was expected then that the plant's capacity would be increased later to meet campus expansion. The tunnel extension will be about 375 feet.

The plant is on the half block bounded by the Milwaukee tracks and Johnson, Washington and West Mark streets. Helmick & Lutz, Minneapolis, designed the plant.

ALL CAMPUS buildings are served by the present plant except dormitories which are served by the Morey Hall plant. Richards Hall, the men's dormitory, also has an auxiliary plant. When the present expansion project is completed, dormitories will also be served by the plant, but will retain their own plants for standby use.

Each of the main heating plant's two present boilers has a capacity of 30,000 pounds of steam hourly. There is a smokestack for each boiler — two stacks now and three when the additional small boiler is installed. The small boiler will be for summer use.

Natural gas is fuel. There is standby oil heating equipment.

THE PRESENT tunnel runs from the heating plant down a north-south alley ending at West Howard Street. Then the tunnel turns slightly west through part of a block bounded by Johnson, Washington, West King and West Mark streets. Next the tunnel goes to the Somsen Hall boiler room. (The Somsen heating plant has been retained on a standby basis.) From Somsen the tunnel turns west under the sidewalk on West King Street and ends at Pasteur Hall. The new addition to the tunnel will go west along West King into the dormitory block which is bounded by West Sanborn, Winona, West King and Huff streets. In the future the tunnel will be extended to form a perimeter on campus.

By GRETCHEN L. LAMBERTON

A NUMBER of people have phoned or written and asked me why I didn't express a view on the placing of the park fountain and the statue of Wenonah, or why the Committee To Save Central Park doesn't take a stand. The truth of the matter is that we worked hard and honestly last summer to try to save the park and have the Post Office placed some other place in town. We were licked. We were too late, and the park is gone, all except an 80-foot strip along Broadway.

As for the statue of Wenonah — for what it's worth here's how I feel. Certainly the statue belongs with the fountain. Since the statue must be moved I agree with Mrs. Rod Watkins' recent suggestion in this newspaper that the statue and the fountain be moved to the center of the small strip that is left of Central Park. That location is still the heart and exact geographical center of our town, and the street still has beauty and dignity.

But, by all means let's have a screen of lovely old trees — they'll be bulldozing up dozens of them soon when the Post Office construction starts — behind Wenonah and the fountain to hide the concrete and brick building.

The sale of our park brought in $80,000. A small fraction of this sum would take care of placing the statue, moving the fountain (or even buying new stone for the fountain if the old one has recently been smashed by vandals), and also having a few beautiful old trees moved for a background screen. I feel most strongly, as do a great many people, that the least the City Council and the Park Board can do now with these 40 pieces of silver is to try to give us, and Winona visitors, at least a narrow strip of beauty in what was once the most beautiful block in our town.

So, let the City Council and the Park Board think earnestly about how they will spend the money paid them for the park that once belonged to all of us.

Yesterday was one of those rare perfect days that the Good Lord presents us Minnesotans with once in a while, but not too often lest we get spoiled. After a spell of terrific sultry heat, then chill rain and high winds, yesterday was a clean, washed day of sun and fresh breeze. The birds were carolling away, the grass was pure emerald green after the rain, and shy young leaves had become full grown almost overnight. Several days ago I walked Shoshoni up the hill on one of those heavy sultry days. It was hard work for it was steamy hot and hard to breathe, and one felt sluggish and exhausted. Even Shoshoni plodded just ahead of me with shambling gait and drooping head like an old gaffer.

But on yesterday's walk up the hill he frisked and careened after rabbits, dug holes furiously and rushed up and down steep cliffs. There was a new-minted freshness and fragrance about the hill. Sweet smelling wild honeysuckle bushes were in bloom and so were the wild grape blossoms, which to me have the most ethereal and exquisite of all perfumes. Just a few days ago I was marveling over the beauty of rose-pink baby poison ivy buds; today they were a lush and shiny poisonous green carpet. Summer is upon us.

'Y' Father-Son Camp-out Slated

Authentic Indian dances and tribal lore by a full-blooded Indian chief will be a top attraction of the YMCA father-son camp-out Saturday and Sunday at White-water State Park.

Chief Black Deer, Onalaska, Wis., a member of the Winnebago tribe will be guest at the program Saturday night following the 7 p.m. induction of new tribes into the We-No-Nah nation, according to Lou King, YMCA youth director.

Other outdoor activities available to campers will be instruction in archery, flycasting and softball, as well as community singing and nature hikes. The camping period opens Saturday at 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Main purpose of the camp-out, King explained, is the fostering of closer father-son relationships. All boys attending must be accompanied by their fathers. King said, and all activities will be shared accordingly.

Participants in the camp-out will arrange for their own transportation and will be lodged on a first-come basis beginning at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. Sufficient bedding, flashlights and dishes are to be furnished by campers themselves with all meals taken together in the dining hall.

CLU Criticizes Secret Boat Vote By County Board

Disapproval of an April 3 secret vote by Winona County commissioners was registered by the Central Labor Union of Winona at its Wednesday evening meeting.

The county board voted 3-2 against the purchase of a jet-powered patrol boat for the county sheriff for river patrol purposes at its April meeting. Names of members voting in opposition or in favor were not listed.

"We believe any elected official of any division of the government should have their votes made a matter of record," said Lester Dienger, CLU president, in a statement issued following Wednesday's meeting.
