WASHINGON (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger met today for the first time in a summit meeting at the White House, the first time since the 1972 summit that the two leaders met in Washington.

The meeting was expected to focus on the threat from the Soviet Union to the United States and on ways to improve relations between the two countries.

Kosygin and Kissinger were to discuss issues including disarmament, trade, and economic cooperation.

The meeting is part of a broader effort to improve relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, which have been strained in recent years due to differences over issues such as arms control and human rights.

Nason on Education How Adults Can Improve Reading

By LELIA J. NAZARE, M.B, M.Ed.

"I can't teach an old dog new tricks," said the saying. But perhaps you can. Perhaps you can try. Many adults have a desire to improve their reading skills, but they often feel discouraged because they think it's too late. The key to improving your reading skills is to start small and work your way up.

CONTINUED learning being healthy is a fact. The more you learn, the more you grow. Adults have some unique advantages over children when it comes to learning. They have a greater understanding of their own experiences and can apply that knowledge to new situations. There are several strategies that can help you improve your reading skills.

1. Set Goals
   - Start small. Set small, achievable goals for yourself. For example, you might decide to read a short article each day.
   - Be specific. Make your goals specific and measurable. This will help you track your progress.

2. Practice Regularly
   - Reading regularly will help you build your skills. Try to read at least a few pages every day.
   - Vary your reading materials. Reading a variety of materials will help you develop a broader vocabulary and understand different writing styles.

3. Use Technology
   - Many online resources are available to help you improve your reading skills. There are很多 websites and apps that offer reading exercises and games.
   - Consider using a reading tutor or a reading coach. They can provide personalized guidance and help you identify areas for improvement.

4. Read Out Loud
   - Reading aloud can help you improve your pronunciation and vocabulary. It also makes learning more fun.
   - Try reading to a group or in a small circle. This can help you build confidence and get feedback.

5. Seek Feedback
   - Ask someone you trust to read your work and provide feedback. They may offer valuable insights and suggestions for improvement.
   - Consider joining a reading group or a book club. This can provide you with opportunities to discuss your reading and learn from others.

Remember, improving your reading skills is a process. It takes time and effort, but the benefits are well worth it. With patience and persistence, you can improve your reading skills and enjoy the benefits of lifelong learning.

Burtons Quitting? Don't Bet On It

BY KARL WILSON
LODIO — Times of the Thunderbirds" when Richard Burton as bearded King Henry VIII stalks the stage majestically and roars at those who are ordering a man and a cock and a poppycock.

Richard Burton told me that he and his wife, Elizabeth Taylor, had their first child, a daughter, in 1962. Burton was in London at the time, and he said he was very happy to have the baby. But he added that he also felt a great deal of responsibility for raising his daughter, whom he named Elizabeth Mary after his wife and mother.

No simple answer

The question of the day is simple. What is the news about the country? Where is it heading? What is the country moving toward? The current situation is fraught with uncertainty due to the complex interplay of various factors such as politics, economics, and social dynamics. The uncertainty is further compounded by the rapid pace of change, which makes it difficult to predict the future.

The need for reliable and accurate reporting is more important than ever. The news media play a crucial role in informing the public and providing a platform for diverse voices. They must strive to maintain journalistic integrity and objectivity in their reporting.

The news is a reflection of the society we live in. It is a record of our actions and our failures. It is a testament to our progress and our struggles. The news is a mirror that reflects our collective human experience.

The role of the news media is to provide a window into the world, to give voice to the voiceless, and to hold power to account. They must be vigilant in their pursuit of truth and justice. The news is a crucible for change, and it is up to us to ensure that it continues to serve its vital function.

The news is not just about events and facts. It is about the human experience, the struggles and triumphs of individuals and communities. The news is about hope and despair, joy and pain, and everything in between. The news is about us.

The news is a vital part of our society. It is a tool for education, a source of inspiration, and a means of communication. It is a reflection of our values and our beliefs. The news is a mirror that reflects our collective human experience.

The news is a reflection of the society we live in. It is a record of our actions and our failures. It is a testament to our progress and our struggles. The news is a mirror that reflects our collective human experience.

Indians Still Fight Against White Progress

FRANKFORD, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Indian population is fighting against the U.S. government for the land they have owned for centuries. The tribe is seeking to protect their land from white settlement and development. The tribe is also fighting to preserve their culture and language.

The tribe's battle has been ongoing for decades, and they continue to face challenges from the government and local developers. Despite these challenges, the tribe remains committed to protecting their land and culture.

The tribe's plight is not unique, as many Native American communities across the U.S. are fighting similar battles. The fight against white settlement and development is not just about land, but about preserving cultural identity and autonomy.

The tribe's fight is not just about protecting their land, but about preserving their culture and way of life. The fight is not just about the past, but about the future of the tribe and its people.
DEAR ABBY:

Sex Education in the Schools

Dear Abby,

We were surprised and disappointed to hear in the radio program that sex education is taught in many schools. When did you change your mind?

We are a group of parents who study to teach marriage seminars. We don't think it is necessary to be married before teaching this subject.

DEAR MR. AND MRS. B.: We too have been concerned about the sex education in the schools. It is important that children have information about sex at an early age, but it must be handled carefully.

Dear Abby,

How can an intelligent woman like you be for sex education in the schools? I am in favor of sex education, but I think it should be handled in a more mature and responsible way.

DEAR WORRIED: Thank you for your sensible comments concerning sex education. I think it is important that children have information about sex at an early age, but it must be handled carefully.

Dear Abby,

I don't believe the above comments are enough. I have heard that all these children are taught in the schools. I don't think they should be taught this subject in such a manner.

DEAR ABBY: I think you are all wrong to say that sex education in schools is okay. During school years children should always be taught about sex, but they should also be taught ways of protecting themselves.

DEAR ABBY AGAIN: Can you provide us with the name of the school in southern California— and not because they need to save the same class— but because they are professionals? If so, I will publicly thank you.

Children Delight In Attic 'Escape'

Traditionally, when children rove from room to room in an old home, they find a secret playroom, a small closet, perhaps an attic. For younger boys and girls such a nook is magical, a place where they can dream, a quiet place to store their treasures. Consequently, younger boys, and young girls too, will make some sort of adventure, though they may not be able to get anywhere. Older boys and girls who find such a nook in an old home, will find it exciting, a place where they can dream, a quiet place to store their treasures. Consequently, older boys will make some sort of adventure, though they may not be able to get anywhere.

One may wonder why the children—both boys and girls—who find such a nook in an old home, will find it exciting, a place where they can dream, a quiet place to store their treasures. Consequently, older boys will make some sort of adventure, though they may not be able to get anywhere.

Top Space Use Expands Bedroom

Many owners, if they own more space than they can use, find themselves in a bind. There are ways to extend or expand your home space. When your home is too small, or when you have extra space, it's time to think of ways to make the most of it. Here are a few ideas to consider:

1. Use the attic: Attics are often neglected, but they can be converted into habitable spaces. With insulation, a new roof, and a few finishing touches, an attic can be turned into a comfortable bedroom or a home office.
2. Use the basement: Basements can be used for a variety of purposes, from a home theater to a guest room. A little insulation and a new floor can turn a dark basement into a cozy living area.
3. Use the garage: Garages can be turned into extra living space. With a little insulation and some finishing, a garage can be turned into a study, a gym, or a home office.
4. Use the screened porch: Screened porches can be turned into extra living space. With a little insulation and some finishing, a screened porch can be turned into a sunroom or a bedroom.

For more ideas on how to expand your home space, contact your local home improvement store for a free consultation.

HERE'S HOW

Planting Peonies

Planting a peony is a simple yet rewarding process. The peony is a hardy flower that thrives in a variety of soils and can be planted in almost any region. Here's how to plant a peony:

1. Choose a site: Peonies prefer full sun and well-drained soil. Choose a site in your garden that gets at least six hours of sunlight per day.
2. Prepare the soil: Peonies prefer slightly acid soil with a pH of 6.5-7.0. Before planting, dig a hole that is twice as wide as the root ball and twice as deep. Fill the hole with compost or well-rotted manure.
3. Plant the peony: Place the peony in the hole, with the top of the root ball just below the surface of the soil. Fill in the soil around the root ball, firming it gently to remove any air pockets.
4. Water the peony: Water the peony well after planting. Keep the soil moist until the plant establishes itself.

For more information on planting peonies, contact your local garden center or nursery.
