Nixon Binding Future To Settlement of War

NIXON (AP) — President Nixon is binding future to settlement of war in Southeast Asia, according to an announcement early today. He said he would ask Congress to remove inequities before the end of 1970, or the middle of 1971, will begin falling due amid growing steadily, said Laird.

He detailed commitments in the arms race.
Popular Front Stirs Imagination of Palestinians, Other Arabs

BEIRUT — The fastest-growing terrorist group in the Arab world, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, is not only seeking to reassert its claim to the Palestinian cause, but also to expand its influence among the Arab world. Although the Popular Front has suffered a series of defeats, its basic group, founded by George Habash, an American-trained Palestinian physician, has managed to maintain its position by using its traditional commando style.

The sensational exploits of the Popular Front, which boasts an army of children, are a mixture of mysticism and modernism and oppose all in its way. The Popular Front is not just a fighting group, but also a political movement founded by Dr. Habbash in 1969, and it is in the process of developing a political wing. Although the Popular Front is not a party, its leaders, including Dr. Habbash, insist on its right to the name "Popular Front" when they try to preempt the name from other groups. WASHINGTON (AP) - Two dozen nurses in the United States are preparing to defy a court order striking down the state laws that have regulated the treatment of the homeless. Twelve states and 10 local authorities have agreed in principle to pay for medical care for the homeless, but the deal would not go into effect without having seen their plan accepted by the federal government.

The Elgin-Millville school board agreed Friday that such a plan would go into effect. The board will conduct a public hearing to consider the proposal early next month.

Many Nursing Homes Suffer Chronic Doctor Deficiency

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chronic Doctor Deficiency continues to plague many nursing homes, but the problem is not going to be solved by a special panel appointed by President Nixon to investigate the situation. The panel, which was formed in response to Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, the Democratic national chairman, is not expected to address the issue directly. The panel is focused on overall health care policy, and the problem of chronic doctor deficiency is seen as a symptom of broader issues.

Twenty Democrats in Congress have already reached agreement in principle on a plan to pay for medical care for the homeless, but the deal would not go into effect without having seen their plan accepted by the federal government.

The blame for neglect falls on both the federal government and the nursing homes. But I don't think it's a difference in the nursing homes. But I don't think the nursing homes have agreed in principle to pay for medical care for the homeless, but the deal would not go into effect without having seen their plan accepted by the federal government.

A proposal for more foreign aid

The proposal of the research and policy community to provide increased foreign aid is not new by any stretch of the imagination. But public and private aid to Latin America has been undergoing a growing disinterest with what are called the "costs" of aid.

With good reason, the committee was not without prodding, and it is not clear that the committee's conclusions are as compelling as they might have been. The committee's recommendations include:

1. More aid for education, health, and infrastructure.
2. Increased aid for trade and investment.
3. Greater aid for social development.
4. Assistance for environmental protection.

The committee did not address the issue of "costs," which are often cited as a reason for limiting aid. Instead, the committee emphasized the benefits of aid, including economic growth, reduced poverty, and improved living standards.

The committee's recommendations are not without criticism. Some argue that aid has not been effective, and that it has sometimes led to increased debt and dependence on foreign countries. Others contend that aid should be focused on meeting the needs of the people, rather than on promoting economic growth.

Despite these criticisms, the committee's recommendations are widely seen as a call for increased aid to Latin America. The committee's work is an important step in addressing the challenges facing the region, and it is hoped that its recommendations will be taken seriously by policymakers.

ROGERS, GROMYKO TO MEET AGAIN

By PATERICK O'KEEFFE

Washington (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko are facing a new and politically sensitive set of talks next week, this time about the future of the divided world.

The two men agreed in a telephone conversation on Friday night to meet in New York next Wednesday for the first time since their last discussions in London last March. The talks are expected to cover a wide range of topics, including the situation in Vietnam, the Middle East, and the future of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

In a statement released in Washington, Rogers said the talks would provide an opportunity to "discuss a range of issues of mutual concern, particularly as they relate to the maintenance of peace and security in the world.

The talks are seen as a significant step toward improving relations between the two countries, which have been strained in recent years due to differences over issues such as the war in Vietnam, the arms race, and the role of the United Nations.

The meeting will be the first between Rogers and Gromyko since their last discussions in London last March. During those talks, the two men agreed to meet again in New York next Wednesday for the first time since their previous discussions.

STATE CONCLCISARY SAYS NEW LAW ON ARBITRATION PANEL GOOD

ST. PAUL (AP) - The Min nesota Labor Relations Board, which de cides disputes involving labor and management, said Friday the state's new Labor Relations Board was a good one.

"It's worked well for 12 years," said Barbara H. Kane, general counsel for the Minnesota Labor Relations Board.

The law covering labor disputes in Minnesota has remained unchanged since 1947 except for a change made in 1967. The Labor Relations Board is composed of three members who are appointed for six-year terms by the governor with the consent of the Senate.

Bob said special provisions of the new law would be helpful if a large number of disputes were involved, regardless of the amount of the dispute.

"It provides for a greater number of disputes to be heard before the Labor Relations Board than is provided in the current law," she said.

The new law also provides for a three-member panel to hear disputes instead of the two-member panel provided in the current law.

"We can decide that public employes rather than local labor relations panels may be involved,

Boone Not Ready To Enter Race

BOONESVILLE (AP) - Actor Richard Boone is putting his political game but isn't really yet to test door-to-door to find out what his political prerogatives trail. "You just can't wait a long time to see who comes" he said. "I would worry if they were to stay out and not wait the money."

Rich Boone's recent disclosure that he may enter the 1956 presidential race in New Hampshire is one of many Republican talk among Republicans, who are not ready yet to take their political guns but aren't ready yet to take their political guns out of power since 1954.

One party leader calls Boone "the only man the Republicans will talk about."

And a local radio station said "I'm not on the bandwagon yet but people are talking about it in New Hampshire."

Boone, it is said by some spokesman to leave from California a year ago as a prominent recruit and today in a New Hampshire town where he has been active in politics.

CHIMNEY Rock, 600 feet above Lake Winona, is the site of the dream home of Mr. and Mrs. Leif A. Holan. Both have always wanted a home on a hill and they found the desired plot after a three-year search.

The one-acre setting, a breathtaking spot on the edge of a cliff just east of Garvin Heights, commands a magnificent view of the city of Winona. One immediately acquires a feeling of tranquility when arriving at the secluded site. Then one experiences feelings of excitement and giddiness when overlooking the sheer drop and awe when gazing at the scenic beauty.

The property, purchased from William Schuler, 726 Johnson St., is named Chimney Rock because of a natural chimney rock formation extending down into the valley. Designing of the home was a joint effort by August L. Vogler, architectural designer and draftsman, who works for Smith Architectural & Engineering Service, and the Holans.

Towards the front of the house is a driveway, a dramatic approach, helping achieve some privacy and lending its own touch of beauty.

On the entrance side, the extension of the center area of the house is a focal point which has been achieved by use of laminated wood beams and sloping cathedral ceiling. Directly in the center of this area an open staircase goes down into the basement, leading to the recreation room, which in turn opens into the patio.

The patio and entire basement area were blasted from solid rock, leaving a natural rock retaining wall on the extreme edge of the hilltop. U.S. Highways 61-14 stretch to the left and Lake Winona is in the background.

Audience Likes 'Tilbury Town'

The People's Theatre on Sunday opened its sixth production and its first of the 1970 season with an interpretation of the well-known American novel, 'Tilbury Town' by John Keats, under the direction of Edwin Arlington Robinson. The play was presented through the medium of Readers' Theatre, a form of drama in which the action is not represented by any characters or scenery, and the audience imagines the scene from the actors' reading of the dialogue. The performance was held in the auditorium of the University of Minnesota Department of English and its purpose was to allow the audience to experience the drama of Keats' novel in a way that is both informative and engaging. The production was a unique and thought-provoking experience for those who attended, as it offered a fresh perspective on Keats' work and the historical context in which it was written.

Bryant, Snyder Pull Ohio U. Into 35-35 Tie With Gophers

MINNEAPOLIS —— Ohio University pulled into a 35-35 tie with the University of Minnesota late in the fourth quarter Saturday afternoon. Minnesota scored a touchdown with less than a minute left in the game on a 40-yard pass from Chip Carney to Alphonzo Eaves. Ohio had scored a touchdown in the first quarter and another in the third.

The game was a poignant moment for Minnesota fans, as Coach Bob Watson died earlier in the day of a heart attack. The team wore a black patch on their helmets in his honor.

Voice of the Outdoors

Identifying Ducks, especially Mallards and Widgeons, can be a challenging task, especially for novice hunters. This task becomes even more daunting when trying to determine the correct identification method. Thankfully, Evansville Naturalist, Jim Wurzbach, has provided answers to these questions through an innovative method used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

A group of 100 hunters was divided into two groups. One group was given class materials on duck species, species management, and the correct method for identifying ducks. The other group was provided with class materials on duck identification, but the method was not explained.

The results of the experiment showed that the group that was given the correct identification method was able to identify 84 percent of the ducks correctly. The group that was provided with class materials only was able to identify 52 percent of the ducks correctly.

DUBLIN, Ireland — In the early morning hours of the second day of the battle of the trenches, in the darkest hour of the special election, the government of Ireland was swept from power by the tide of public opinion. FIGHTING

WASHINGTON (AP) - The fight over a campaign donation by Robert Brooks of New York in the 1972 election for the chair of the Democratic National Committee has been a symbol of the continued failure of the Democratic Party to unite behind a single candidate.

The donation, which was made to the Democratic National Committee in 1972, was the subject of a bitter dispute between the two major candidates for the chair of the Democratic National Committee.

The dispute began in 1972, when Brooks, a New York lawyer, gave $50,000 to the Democratic National Committee. The donation was seen as an attempt to influence the nomination of the party's presidential candidate.

The nomination process was boycotted by several candidates, including Henry Kissinger, who was eventually nominated by the committee.

The Brooks donation was eventually returned to the Democratic National Committee, but it has remained a source of controversy for the party.

SEPTEMBER 28, 1969
$4 Million Project Brings Direct Distance Dialing to Area

Long Distance Shrinks With DDD

By C. Gordon Holte
Sunday Editor

A PREDICTION made some 90 years ago when the first telephone conversation in Winona crackled and sputtered across a few yards of wire strung between two downtown offices will realize new fulfillment late this fall when the final link is clasped to place Winona area residents in dramatically new and closer voice contact with millions of telephone users across the nation.

On Dec. 7 the area served by Northwestern Bell Company's Winona office will be joined in the farflung Direct Distance Dialing (DDD) network that will bring subscribers here within 11 flicks of the telephone dial — or, on certain instruments, as many pushbutton taps — of a friend, relative or business contact almost anywhere on the North American continent.

In the culmination that day of a $4 million physical expansion and improvement project that has been in progress for more than a year, Winona also will assume a new and significant role as a major regional toll center in Northwestern Bell's system.

The transition to direct distance dialing will represent the most ambitious development in telephone service in the Winona area since a pioneer Minneapolis communications technician, F. H. Herrick, arrived here early in 1880 to supervise the first telephone installation in this city.

There were 21 subscribers to the new service when Herrick set up an office on the second floor of a Center Street building that year and an experimental transmission prompted an observation by the editor of the Winona Republican that "The exchange promises to be a great convenience in dispatching business and, of course, all of the leading concerns and offices in town will be attached to the popular highway of rapid communication. The achievement already made by the telephone gives promise of still more wonderful results."

Speaking a few months before the first attempts at long distance calls between Winona and Minneapolis — the signals then were so weak that conversations had to be relayed at intermediate points between the two cities — he couldn't have envisioned the most recent forthcoming "result" which will allow Winonans to dial directly a good many of the more than 100 million telephones now in use throughout the United States.

For users of the 12,000 telephones served by the Winona office in Winona, Goodview, Witoka and adjacent rural areas the advent of direct distance dialing and associated service and equipment improvements will effect a number of changes in telephone use and habits.

In the first place, prior to the Dec. 7 changeover all subscribers will be assigned new seven-digit numbers, replacing the familiar four- and five-digit identifications of the past.

When he makes his first telephone call on that day the user will notice a subtle difference in the dial tone when he hears a humming sort of sound rather than the buzzing dial tone to which he has been accustomed.

The most noticeable difference, of course, will be apparent when he makes his first long distance call.

Dan McDonell, manager of the Winona Northwestern Bell Telephone office, explains that with direct distance dialing the placing of a long distance call becomes a vastly simplified and faster procedure. In most cases, no longer will it be necessary to dial 0 for the long distance operator, wait for an operator at the central switchboard to answer, give her his number and the number to be called and then wait for the operator to dial the distant number.

With DDD the caller simply dials the number 1 to gain access to the direct distance dialing network, then the area code number of the community he is calling and, finally, the seven digits of the distant number.

In other words, the distant number will be ringing in the time it takes to dial the 11 times, probably, in most cases, less than 10 seconds.

Subscribers, at an additional charge, also will be offered the convenience of Bell System's "Touch-Tone" telephone, an instrument in which 10 pushbuttons replace the conventional dial and a number to be called can be tapped out in a matter of only two to five seconds.

The user of the electronically-operated Touch-Tone instrument will hear a series of musical tones in his headset as he touches each of the pushbuttons while tapping out his number.

As an adjunct to the change in operations, some 900 telephones serving Winona State College administrative offices, dormitory rooms, service and other facilities after Jan. 4 will be embraced in a Centrex-type service system which allows direct dialing to each station rather than channeling each call through the campus switchboard.

Each of the 900-odd telephones on the campus will be assigned a number and a specific office or room may be called directly by dialing the prefix number 457 and then the number to be called.

While a new telephone number, a different dial tone and, perhaps, a new instrument in his home or office and a quicker, more efficient way of placing long distance telephone calls will be of greatest interest to the average telephone user beginning Dec. 7, the most dramatic aspect of the $4 million improvement project is seen in the expanded central office at West 3rd and Johnson streets.

Here a new addition to the original telephone building and the 1965 addition has been constructed to house the equipment that will establish within the year Winona as the direct dialing home office for all of Southeastern Minnesota.

Since early this year as many as 50 employees of Western Electric—Northwestern Bell's equipment supplier—have been brought to Winona to work with some local plant employees for the installation of the new equipment.

Nearly a half a million feet of wire, more than 625,000 electrical connectors and carloads of sophisticated electronic equipment went into the expanded building for the direct distance dialing service and other improvements.

When the change to the new operation in a plant that now handles some 800,000 telephone calls a day — about 7,000 of them

INSTANT RECORD . . . When Direct Distance Dialing (DDD) is made available to Winona area subscribers in December each time a directly dialed long distance call is made the calling number, the station called and the length of the call will be recorded automatically on tape punched on these machines in the Winona office. The tapes, inspected here during an equipment test by Dan McDonell, manager of the Winona office, will be sent to Northwestern Bell's Minneapolis accounting office for customer billing.

CABLE VAULT . . . All telephone calls through the Winona service center are carried on lines in this cable vault in an area below ground level in the new addition. About 20,000 pairs of wire are in the cables — some 14,000 pairs are now being used — housed in the vault which will accommodate future expansion. Harald Schuppenhauer, an equipment man in the Winona office, checks one of the new cables.
IDENTIFICATION . . . Kenneth Prigge of the Winona equipment staff adjusts a unit in the direct distance dialing installation which identifies the calling number each time a long distance call is placed by direct dialing. The automatic perforator machines in an adjacent room are activated then to record data for billing purposes.

long distance — is made sometime on the morning of Dec. 7 it will be the largest "flash cutover" — or instant change to a new operational facility — ever undertaken by Northwestern Bell in Minnesota.

The immediate effect of the switchover that day will be to provide Winona, Goodview, Witoka and subscribers in nearby rural areas with direct distance dialing.

As new equipment is received and installed in other offices the service through the Winona central office will be extended to about 50 more Southeastern Minnesota communities in the next six months or so.

In all, the extension of service will find the Winona office capable of handling something like 2½ times the number of long distance telephone calls as it does today.

To acquaint Winona area customers with the new system that will be inaugurated in December, McDonell and his staff will be mounting an extensive informational campaign during the next two months.

During the week of Oct. 6 letters, together with new 1970 directory information pages explaining some of the mechanics of the new dialing system, will be mailed to all subscribers.

Beginning Oct. 13 each telephone user will be called by a girl in the central office, a call that will serve to check out operation of new equipment and afford the subscriber to ask questions about the new service to be initiated.

Then, early in December new telephone directories listing the new seven-digit numbers will be mailed to all in the service area.

McDonell explains that when the new system goes into operation the user need, in most cases, have only the area code and number of the distant station to be called to place a call within seconds to almost any station in the United States.

ANOTHER FIRST . . . This jet engine type gas turbine generator used for auxiliary power for emergency use is the only one of its kind in the Northwestern Bell system in Minnesota. Jerry Stevens, an equipment man in the Winona office, stands beside the generator which has a 250-kilowatt ampere capacity and is completely self-sustaining in the event of a power outage. Under normal operating conditions conventional alternating current power is rectified to direct current to charge batteries which are used to power telephone equipment. In the event of a power failure the auxiliary generator would be cut in to supply the current. Equipment man Jerry Stevens checks the turbine housed in an upper level of the building to protect it from possible flooding conditions in times of high water.
To call a person in Minneapolis, for example, the Winona area resident first dials 1 for connection to the DDD network, then 612, the area code for Minneapolis, and the number of the person with whom he wishes to speak, perhaps 453 8925, and immediately the number called rings.

As soon as he has dialed 1, a complex system of electrical components activates an automatic electronic billing machine and a perforated tape notes the calling number and electronically records the station called and the duration of the conversation.

This perforated tape is sent to the Minneapolis Northwestern Bell accounting office where it is fed into a computer and customers are billed for long distance service charges.

Beginning Dec. 7, McDonell observes, Winonans will notice a few other new things about telephone operation.

Today, for example, if one calls another person and inadvertently neglects to replace the receiver properly after the conversation is completed, the telephone of the person called is dead until the receiver is replaced.

With the new equipment, in a situation such as this service is restored automatically 30 seconds after the caller has replaced his receiver.

If, today, a receiver is left off the hook or not properly placed in the cradle the dial tone buzz is virtually inaudible and an extended period of time could elapse, during which callers would get a busy signal, before it was noticed the receiver was not properly in place.

If this happens after the new service is inaugurated in December, 30 seconds after the receiver has been taken off the cradle a loud and distinct beep tone will call attention to the fact that the receiver is off the hook.

Interruptions in the dialing process are not accommodated by the new equipment, either. There's an eight-second allowable lapse between each number dialed; a delay of more than eight seconds ends the dialing cycle automatically, a dial tone is heard and the number must be dialed again.

In other words, if a user dials the first three digits, then finds he must refer to the directory for the next and more than eight seconds elapse while he looks for the number the dial tone cuts in and he must begin dialing again.

New operational procedures will eliminate many — and, eventually, almost all of the service interruptions of the past since underground cable installation is being made, rather than the former aerial lines, in all new extensions of service, eliminating damage to lines caused by windstorms, sleet, other natural causes and accidents.
Winona Office Capability More Than Doubled

POWER SOURCE . . Edward H. Stehl, left, Winona central office foreman, and Donald Kaufman, equipment man, check batteries in the power room which supply power for telephone communications. Rectified alternating current from conventional power source is used to charge the batteries. An emergency power supply is available on a standby basis.

TOLL CHECK . . Robert Pavek, a Winona equipment man, is at the new toll test board which provides for testing of all long distance circuits to maintain high quality toll service.

SWITCHBOARD . . Miss Eleanor Przytarski, standing, chief operator at the Winona office, supervises the 55 operators who work on various shifts. With the switch to direct distance dialing the operators will, for the most part, handle coin, credit card and person-to-person long distance calls and special problems and, relieved of duty on most routine distance calls, will be in a position to afford even faster and better service than in the past.

EQUIPMENT TEST . . Winona equipment men Terry Eckholm, left, and Jerry Tardy, refer to schematic drawings as they check equipment in one of the many bays installed in the new plant addition as a part of the $4 million improvement program.

LAST STAND . . . Burt Lancaster attempts to rally a small American force against advancing Germans in CASTLE KEEP, opening Wednesday at the State.

State Books 'Castle Keep'

Lancaster War Drama Star

During World War II, a handful of G.I.'s led by a stern major, played by Burt Lancaster, take a stand in a 16th century Belgian castle, whose irreplaceable art treasures stand directly in the way of the advancing Germans. In CASTLE KEEP, opening Wednesday at the State Theatre.

The owner of the castle welcomes the men, hoping they will save the art treasures, and even countenance an affair between his young countess and the major.

The drama reaches its climax when the major, astride a white horse, leads his tiny force—supported by village prostitutes—to take a stand against the advancing Germans.

Patty Duke, playing an insecure 18-year-old, leaves her over-solicitous parents and has a brief affair with a young married man that shows her she can be needed and loved in ME, NATALIE, playing through Tuesday at the State.

'Cowboy' in Extended Run

The widely-acclaimed MIDNIGHT COWBOY, starring Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight, will be seen in its extended run this week at the Cinema.

The drama focuses on the relationship that develops between Voight, a Texan who comes to New York to find what he believes will be an easy life catering to women who will pay him for his company, and Hoffman, a fevered and crippled New York hustler whom he encounters on his arrival in the city. Both are failures in their chosen endeavors and end up depending on each other for survival.

Sky Vu Ends '69 Season

The Sky Vu Theatre closed out its 1969 season tonight with a double-feature attraction, CHASTITY and LADY IN CEMENT.

In the first, Cher of the Sonny and Cher musical duo, plays the title role as a girl of today's generation with an inquiring curiosity which provokes her into a maze of astounding situations she must experience for herself.

"Lady in Cement" has Frank Sinatra in a continuation of the underworld adventures of Tony Rome, a Miami private detective who discovers the murderer of a girl found in Biscayne Bay.

Eleanor Parker in Horror Film Plot

Eleanor Parker appears as a glamorous, rich and invalid woman who lives in a New Orleans mansion overrun by cats, to whom she plans to leave her millions, in EYE OF THE CAT, arriving Wednesday at the Winona Theatre.

A scheming girl, played by Gayle Hunnicutt, locates a long-missing nephew and induces him to return to his lovely aunt and work on her to change her will in favor. The pair then will arrange to have her suffer a fatal accident so they can share the inheritance.

The aunt makes him the sole heir but his phobia about cats which fill him with paralyzing fear provides a horror ending for the movie.

Museum Leaders Select Exhibits

Collectors’ Favorites Seen

The Museum of American Folk Art in New York City, a small institution with a flair for the unusual, has opened its sixth season with a pictorial exhibition called "Collector’s Choice." The show, which will be on display to Nov. 9, was assembled by asking the museum’s members, trustees and advisory board to select their favorite objects from various folk set collections on the eastern seaboard. American folk painting is represented by many masters and a smaller number of landscapes and portraits.

ONE OF the most important portraits is a full-length, life-size, whitewashed portrait of Newburyport, Mass., created by John Brewster Jr. It was one of the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob M. Kaplan of New York. One section of the show is arranged by the museum’s director, Mary Black, displaying a number of watercolor portraits painted by A. R. and R. W. Shute in the 1870s and 1880s.

Two signed Shute portraits are on loan from the Fruitlands Museum and Old Sturbridge Village. A painting of Sarah Hobbs of Evington, Va., was lent by the artist and his publishers. The Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection in Wilton, Conn., lent a miniature of a lady in blue and a large watercolor on paper of a male, both attributed to the Studios.

AMONG the other portraits are several lent by Mrs. Jerome Rubin, New York artist historian, showing her ancestors in the Thorne family in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. One, a portrait of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Starr of New York and Chelsea, N.H., was shown by the show’s part, "The Children of Nathan Starr," who he an early American painter, Abner Andrews. But portraits are only part of the show.

Another member of the museum’s advisory council, Mr. Bauer, who happens to be director, organized the exhibition, "America Art," selected from his favorite "Mediation by the Sea," lent by arrangement with Harry C. Nottingham, director of Boston’s Museum of Fine Arts. Portraits in a similar style came from Herbert W. Hemphill Jr. Seven watercolor scenes by the early 19th century folk artist Eu- nia Griswold-Flinn have been lent by Col. and Mrs. Edgar W. Flint, New York, and a well known collectors of folk art.

Another scene, a painting by R. A. Snodgrass, "The Road to the Round Rock," was lent by Dr. and Mrs. Delbert-M. Fordham, Olympic figure skating champion. On public view for the first time from the collection and still life from the collection of the Museum of Fine Arts in New York and Stanford, the collection of New York and Stamford, the collection has been lent by Col. and Mrs. Edgar W. Flint, New York, and a well known collectors of folk art.

New 'Seen-Stealers'!

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

"SOMETHING WORTH BEING LOOKING INTO!" That's the rating the pace-setting crowd has given the new fashion accessory glasses. These young style-makers offer an approving wink to the matching frame and lens tints. They've discovered the plastic spectacles do wonders for a complexion—a soft pink enlivens a fair skin, lavender cools a ruddy face, while beige balances and blends. Whether perched on the nose, or slung through a lapel, the smart shapes are "in" and "on," as actress Deanna Lund illustrates.

The frames also can be put to good beauty use. They include geometric ovals, rounds, squares, even large wrap-around shields. Select the shape that flatters you best. Experts point out round frames open the eyes, square styles provide frames open the eyes, while ovals add length. Deanna, seen in the 20th-TV series "Land of the Giants," reminds frames can be color-coordinated to complement complexion, hair or wardrobe. For instance, she teams beige glasses, gold shirt and rust pullover for a fashion flash.

ACCESSORY glasses have prompted a trend in eye makeup, too. Eyeliner is outdated when looking through the tinted lenses, which provide their own color shield. Matte tones and matte finish give the right amount of definition. Blend is the key to application. Deepest color is brushed directly behind lashes and gently shaded to brow socket. A dry, sable brush is used to smooth and lighten the shadow as it reaches brow bone. Let the shading flow from deep to delicate. And, if necessary, dust a peel of translucent powder over the eyelid to assure the fragile "behind the lens" look.

DEAR ABBY:

Must Learn to Hold That Tiger

By ARIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For 18 years I have been married to a handsome, charming professional man. He is also an incurable philanderer. When we walk into a room filled with strangers, I can pick his victim within 10 minutes. No one would suspect that he would follow up a cocktail party flirtation, but he does. I have covered up for him many times, and have stayed with him for the sake of the children, hoping each affair would be his last. Everyone thinks we are an ideal couple. They should only know! Abby, does a leopard ever change his spots?

DEAR WIFE: You have your animals confused. Yours is a wolf. Covering up for a philandering husband is no way to live. He who raises the roof in his marriage may not change her clothes and spots, but she can train him before he gets too wild.

Abby

DEAR ABBY: My darling wife of over 40 years (I'll call her Bertha) has to have a cigaret in her hand every minute or she's not happy. That's not all, she is too vain to wear glasses all the time, so she is always missing the ash tray, so we have cigaret burns in most of our tables and a couple of her favorite chairs. I have brought home ash trays as big as a fry pan, but she misses those, too.

When we are guests in the homes of friends, the hostess doesn't take her eyes off Bertha for fear she'll burn up something wondering. Won't you please say something in your column to let my missus know I love her but I wish she'd quit smoking? — LARRY

DEAR LARRY: You've said it all, Larry. Just see that your missus doesn't miss this column.

DEAR ABBY: When someone has lost a member of his family by suicide, what should friends do?

Abby: It doesn't seem right to just ignore the situation, yet you can't write and say, "I'm sorry to hear that your brother shot himself." Or should I say, "Shot himself—ACCIDENTALLY?" Would that be better?

DEAR FRIEND: Offer your condolences, but do not mention the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: I have never heard of a big belly getting in the way of true love. In the 15 years Joey and I have been married, Joey gained 56 pounds, and I gained 40. But if he can stand MY big belly, I can stand HIS. We both want to thank you for a wonderful column.

DEAR PAT: And I want to thank you for a wonderful belly laugh.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
