WASHINGTON (AP) — The new liberal policy emboldened West Germany's new Chancellor Willy Brandt, who said he would try to improve ties with the communist Soviet Union.

But while he made no specific reference to the Holocaust, his emphasis on détente with the Soviet Union was likely to infuriate many Germans who saw his policy as a betrayal of their country's past.

Despite the controversy, Brandt's policy was well received in the West, where it was seen as a practical move towards a lasting peace in Europe.

But the policy was also controversial in the West, with many fearing that it would undermine the Atlantic Alliance and lead to a weakening of the West's resolve in the Cold War.
Spotlight on ‘movers and shakers’ of Minnesota Legislature

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) -- Defense writers who called his 1969 legislative career "a fizzle" have predicted that Minnesota Senate Majority Leader Roger Mrazek will have a bright future.

The search for Senate Majority Leader in Minnesota has ended with a bang, and it's not just because Mrazek was elected to the job. The race was a closely contested one, with Mrazek winning by a narrow margin.

Mrazek, a former priest, had been considered a shoo-in for the job, but his opponent, Sen. James Dirlam, mounted a strong challenge. The race was decided in the final hours of the session, as Dirlam's support began to wane.

Mrazek's victory is a win for the Liberal wing of the party, which has been struggling to gain ground in recent years. The win also puts an end to speculation about who would be the new leader, as Mrazek was already considered the favorite.

Mrazek, who has been a state legislator for 20 years, was chosen by his colleagues to replace Dirlam, who had been in the job since 1989.

The move is a significant one, as the Senate is the more powerful chamber in the state legislature, and the new leader will have a major role in shaping the state's policies.

Mrazek has already made it clear that he plans to focus on issues such as education, healthcare, and the economy. He is expected to work closely with Gov. Mark Dayton to ensure that the state's budget is balanced.

The election of Mrazek as Senate Majority Leader is a significant victory for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) party, which has been struggling to maintain its hold on the state legislature.

With Mrazek in charge, the DFL is expected to continue to push for policies that benefit working people, and to work with the governor to ensure that the state's budget is balanced.

Mrazek's victory is also a boost for the DFL's statewide effort to attract more voters, as the party looks to build on its recent gains.

Overall, the Senate Majority Leader race was a key moment in the state's political landscape, and Mrazek's victory is likely to have far-reaching implications for the direction of the state in the years to come.

Ask Supreme Court to rule on retired workers

The case of the retired workers who were denied benefits by their former employer is one of the most high-profile cases before the Supreme Court. The workers are seeking compensation for the years they worked for the company, but were denied benefits due to their age.

The case has been ongoing for several years, with the Supreme Court hearing oral arguments earlier this month. The court is expected to rule on the case in the coming months.

The case involves a group of former workers who were denied retirement benefits by their former employer. The workers, who are all over 60 years old, worked for the company for many years before retiring.

The company argued that it was within its rights to deny the workers benefits because of their age, but the workers argued that it was illegal and discriminatory.

The case has been watched closely by other companies, who are concerned about the potential legal implications.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule on the case in the coming months, and the decision could have far-reaching implications for the way companies treat older workers.

Charged with 1st degree murder in wife's death

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A Burlington man has been charged with first degree murder in the death of his wife, who was found bludgeoned to death in their apartment on Christmas Day.

The man, identified only as John Doe, is expected to be arraigned in court today. The victim, 35-year-old Mary Doe, was reportedly found in her apartment by a roommate who called 911.

The Burlington Free Press reports that the man lived with the victim and another friend in the same building. The roommate told police that she heard noise in the apartment around 4 a.m. and found the victim lying on the floor with blood on her face.

The victim's friend said she had been out with the couple earlier in the evening and they had been drinking.

The man has been cooperative with investigators and has been released on $50,000 bail. He is scheduled to appear in court next week.

Accident victim's condition improves

A Manchester, N.H., man who was involved in a serious car accident on Monday is reportedly improving and is expected to make a full recovery.

The man, identified only as John Smith, was involved in a head-on collision on Monday afternoon on NH 111 in Concord. He was reportedly taken to the hospital with serious injuries.

The Manchester Police Department said in a press release that the man, who is in his 40s, was airlifted to a hospital in Boston for treatment. A storm is roiling the Mississippi River

By DAVID R. BAEZ

A storm is roiling the Mississippi River, according to the National Observer, which reports that a river-wide environmental issue is under consideration. The article suggests that the river-wide issue is being considered at a time when environmental concerns are growing across the United States.

The National Observer focuses on Winona

From the National Observer, it seems that Winona is being mentioned in connection with an environmental issue. The article does not provide specific details about the issue, but it does mention that Winona is located on the Mississippi River.

Desegregation support gains

According to the National Observer, there is growing support for desegregation in education. The article notes that one in six black families (16 percent) report that they were affected by the desegregation move. The National Observer also states that people who live in the South are more likely to support desegregation in education.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is working on a plan to deepen the river.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is working on a plan to deepen the river as part of a wider effort to improve navigation. The Corps of Engineers has reported that the river is becoming shallower and more difficult to navigate. The Corps has identified the need for deeper channels to enable freighters to circumnavigate the shallow areas.

The dilemma — and the Engineers — is being faced with is how to balance the needs of the engineers to deepen the channel with the needs of the communities that depend on the river for transportation and recreation.

The environmental impact of the Corps' proposal is being extensively analyzed by experts in the field.

The Corps of Engineers is tasked with determining the best course of action to deepen the channel, and it is working closely with stakeholders to ensure that the proposal is environmentally sound.

The Corps of Engineers' proposal is facing opposition from some environmental groups, who are concerned about the impact of the project on the river's ecosystem.

The Corps of Engineers' proposal is also facing opposition from some communities, who are concerned about the impact of the project on their livelihoods.

The Corps of Engineers' proposal is facing opposition from some political leaders, who are concerned about the cost of the project.

The Corps of Engineers' proposal is facing opposition from some citizens, who are concerned about the impact of the project on their quality of life.

The Corps of Engineers' proposal is facing opposition from some businesses, who are concerned about the impact of the project on their competitiveness.

Dear Abby:

Handicap nothing to tease about

By ANNIE JULIETTE BURDEN

DEAR ABBY: I know a young woman with a slight speech problem whose friends tease her mercilessly. We have been told that it is wrong to tease someone with a disability to the point of making them feel inferior.

However, my friend is so severely handicapped that she is beyond their control. So will it be okay if I, my kids, and any other people who know of this problem, tease my friend as often as possible, so that she will not feel inferior and become depressed by our teasing?

Sincerely,

INDIANA MOTHER

DEAR INDIAN MOTHER: It is not okay to tease someone with a minor handicap that she can control but not overcome. However, teasing someone with a severe handicap, which may not be "beyond their control," is deliberate cruelty.

This is a matter of respect for other people, and parents should teach their children to understand and help others who differ from them. Please review your book for additional information.

DEAR ABBY: I am a glucose and need an upscale opinion. My husband and I removed an invitation to a high society wedding. We have two married daughters, Judy and Trudy, who made a better-than-marrying-for-you, for each other's hands to marriage in the wedding, but what did

Mrs. Sagan. My husband and I would really like to go, but I don't know whether or not to go to it. I don't want to go to it, but I don't think that the person who sent the invitation was 알달 in this manner. Only says that accepting or declining an invitation should have nothing to do with the way she was brought up or what she would do with it, but as a mother, I see it differently. Those who accepted the invitation have decided not to go because they did go.

DEAR DEAR: I agree with Judy. In my case, you and your husband may accept or decline only for cultural or religious reasons, and your married daughter has the same right.

DEAR DEAR: Your company's husband worked for me and paid me very well. So do you think that you are entitled to be given the same amount of money because you are married? You have the same opportunity to work as well as your husband.
