LAOTIAN MILITARY MOVE

FROM VIETNAM BY END OF 1971

THREAT WORRY OVER the fighting in Laos centers over the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. From Feb. 22 to 27, a national cross section of 1,620 persons was asked: "Will speed it up?"

According to a survey of one thousand persons, 43 percent of the respondents answered "yes," 40 percent answered "no," and 17 percent answered "don't know." The survey was conducted by the Associated Press.

The results indicate that there is a strong public sentiment in favor of accelerating the withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. However, the survey also shows that there is still some uncertainty among the public regarding the impact of the withdrawal on the pace of the war.

The most sweeping? measure before the subcommittee was introduced by Senate Democrat William Proxmire. The measure would have required the president to report to Congress on the status of American forces in Vietnam and to provide a recommendation for the future of the war.

The subcommittee, chaired by Senator Mike Mansfield, held a series of hearings on the issue of American involvement in Vietnam. The hearings were characterized by heated debate and emotional testimony from both sides of the issue. The subcommittee is expected to report its findings to the Senate in the near future.

The most controversial?measure before the subcommittee was introduced by Senator George McGovern. The measure would have authorized the president to use military force in Vietnam if he determines that the country is threatened by aggression.

The subcommittee also heard testimony from former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who supported the measure. Johnson argued that the measure would have allowed him to use American forces in Vietnam if he determined that the country was threatened by aggression.

The subcommittee is expected to report its findings to the Senate in the near future. The hearings have been characterized by heated debate and emotional testimony from both sides of the issue. The subcommittee is expected to report its findings to the Senate in the near future.
Unusual flexible vacation house

By ANDY LANG

There are days when it is difficult to fill the needs of families who have houses more than the usual space of modern life. For these families, space should be divided into spaces of the kind and style of the house in the first place, and space should be divided into spaces of the kind and style of the house in the second place. This means, essentially, a house that can be a compact little one, or one that can be expanded into a more spacious one.

Samuel Paul has come up with a house that is exactly what he needs. The house is 125 square feet, and it has three entrances leading to the central foyer. The foyer contains a full kitchen, dining area, and living room. This room contains a full bathroom, and there is a second bathroom on the same floor. To the left is the bedroom wing, which leads to the upstairs bedroom. The bedroom wing contains a full bathroom, and there is an extra bathroom on the same floor. To the right of the bedroom wing is a large deck area, and there is an optional porch which has access from inside through sliding glass doors.

To the right of the central foyer are two bedrooms, one on the first floor and one on the second floor. The bedroom on the first floor has a separate entrance from the garage, and the bedroom on the second floor has a separate entrance from the second floor. The bedrooms and the bathroom on the first floor are in separate wings, and the bedroom on the second floor is in a separate wing. The house can be placed on a lot to take advantage of the view.

Supermayor: ... first you’ve got to get their attention

By GERRY WAGNER

Adams-Prairie Press Writer

Moynihan was not only the mayor, but also the city manager, as well as the chief of police and fire. He had to be able to lead city hall in a way that would be acceptable to everyone.

In the last month of the city’s 1980 term, May 1, Moynihan realized that he could not continue as mayor. He was unable to lead the city in a way that was acceptable to everyone.

The city was facing a series of problems, including a serious economic downturn, and Moynihan knew that he could not deal with these problems alone.

He had to find someone who could help him lead the city in a more effective way.

Moynihan approached the councilmen and asked them to consider a new mayor. He wanted them to think about the future of the city and the need for a new leader.

The councilmen agreed to consider the possibility of a new mayor. They knew that the city needed a leader who could bring a new perspective to the job.

Moynihan’s approach showed that he was willing to take responsibility for the city’s problems and to work towards finding a solution.

He demonstrated his leadership skills and his commitment to the city, and he was able to gain the support of the councilmen.

Moynihan’s actions showed that he was committed to the city’s future and that he was willing to do whatever it took to lead the city in a way that was acceptable to everyone.

By the end of the month, Moynihan had successfully negotiated a new mayor, who was able to bring a new perspective to the job and to work towards finding a solution to the city’s problems.

Moynihan’s leadership skills and his commitment to the city were evident, and he was able to gain the support of the councilmen.

His approach was an example of effective leadership, and it showed that he was willing to take responsibility for the city’s problems and to work towards finding a solution.

Community Theatre sets 4-play season

The 1954 season of the Community Theatre in St. Paul, as announced by Richard Pfleger, the theatre's director, is something of a unique offering. Instead of a long season of only one or two productions, this year the theatre is presenting a variety of shows in four separate engagements. Each of these engagements will feature a different type of production, and the combined total of plays in each will be in the same size as the annual long season. It is hoped that this varied approach will attract a large and diversified audience to the theatre.

The first engagement will open on October 15, with a comedy called "The Man Who Came to Dinner," featuring Richard Benyon and Mildred Natwick. This play is a humorous farce about a snobbish writer who suddenly finds himself forced to take care of his father, who is brought to the city by the writer's wife. The play is directed by Frank C. Sharp, who is also the producer of the production.

The second engagement will begin on November 12, with a musical called "Lady Be Good." This show features a score by George and Ira Gershwin, and is directed by John B. Markslie. The musical comedy is set in the 1920s and follows the lives of a group of young people in New York City.

The third engagement will start on December 10, with a drama called "The Women." This play, written by Arthur Miller, is a powerful and moving story about the lives of six women who are involved in a trial for the murder of their male survivors. The play is directed by Frank C. Sharp, who is also the producer of the production.

The final engagement will begin on January 7, with a musical called "Brigadoon." This show features a score by Douglas Furber and Alan Jay Lerner, and is directed by John B. Markslie. The musical comedy is set in the Scottish highlands and follows the adventures of two American soldiers who find themselves transported to a magical village where the residents are caught in a time loop.

Tickets for each of these engagements will go on sale at the beginning of each month, and will be available at the box office and through Ticketmaster. Season subscriptions are also available for those who wish to purchase tickets for all four engagements.

Happy Hairston and Gail Goodrich, respectively, by winning the Southern Middle Atlantic Conference basketball team titles, took on Danny Andrist, the hard-hitting 142-pound wrestler of the University of Mississippi.

The Williams, who led Jackson State to its first-ever NCAA basketball championship last month, lamented the absence of the day's event.

"This obviously is due largely to the influence of the PR agencies in the United States," said Williams. "The publicity and promotion efforts of these agencies have a major impact on sports events."
Shannon dumps in 42, Gophers topple Badgers

SHOFFSTETT, Wis. — The Minnesota Golden Gophers were in Top Ten form Saturday as they eked out a victory over the University of Wisconsin state crown in track and field events.

The Gophers, guided by coach John Mark Winzenried, took a step toward the top of the world rankings with a strong showing in the 100-meter dash and the 400-meter relay.

Shannon, making it his fourth straight meet with an appearance in the finals, was the highlight of the meet. The Gophers' star did not appear to be at his best, but his presence was enough to give the team a victory.

In the 100-meter dash, Shannon ran a time of 10.0 seconds, beating Mark Winzenried and Greg Johnson by a narrow margin. Shannon's time was the best ever by a collegian indoors, and his performance was enough to give the team a victory.

In the 400-meter relay, the Gophers finished first with a time of 40.0 seconds. Shannon, leading off, set the pace with a strong first leg. The team's success in this event was enough to secure the team's victory.

The Gophers' victory was not without its share of drama. In the closing moments of the meet, Shannon was involved in a close call with Johnson, who was attempting to challenge for the lead. Shannon's quick thinking and lightning-fast reaction allowed him to secure the victory for the Gophers.

Shannon's victory was a testament to the team's hard work and dedication. The Gophers' victory was a well-deserved victory, and they will no doubt continue to be a force to be reckoned with in the years to come.
