McGovern claims he has chance at New Hampshire upset

Manchester, N.H. (AP) — The 1972 presidential race that can only have stared dead by 9:00 Sunday night when the polls close here Monday in New Hampshire, where a Democrat is seen as a long shot, has a chance to serve as an awkward prelude to the nation's primary season.

The mood was set by President Richard M. Nixon, who told the people present here Monday that they should vote for Senator George McGovern of South Dakota for the Democratic nomination in order to "prevent a disaster.

McGovern, who is running third in national polls, must win here to keep alive his campaign for the nomination. He wants to show that he can do so without the benefit of heavy advertising and a head start from a delegate structure, like those enjoyed by Senator Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts, who has already pocketed a majority of the Massachusetts delegation.

Kennedy is expected to win a healthy majority in New Hampshire, where he is leading in the polls. The state, which has a reputation for moderate Democratic voters, has been a virtual one-party state for most of its history.

As the race came down to the wire, the two candidates held a series of meetings and rallies here Monday. Kennedy, who is running third in the polls, held a town meeting in Concord, the state capital, and McGovern held a rally in Manchester. Both candidates are expected to do well in the state, which has a reputation for moderate Democratic voters.

In the 170-mile stretch of New Hampshire that runs between Concord and the Maine border, McGovern has been trying to establish himself as a viable candidate for the nomination, while Kennedy has been trying to consolidate his lead.

The state's Democratic convention will be held next month, and both candidates are expected to make a strong showing there. McGovern is expected to do well in the convention, while Kennedy is expected to do even better.

In the final days of the campaign, both candidates have been traveling extensively, making appearances in key states and working to build support for their campaigns. McGovern, who is running third in the polls, has been trying to establish himself as a viable candidate for the nomination, while Kennedy has been trying to consolidate his lead.

In other words, the United States Senate did not have what George McGovern called an "even" chance to win. The United States Senate did not have what George McGovern called an "even" chance to win. The United States Senate did not have what George McGovern called an "even" chance to win. The United States Senate did not have what George McGovern called an "even" chance to win. Investigating team probes ruins of airliner that fell into house

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — An airliner making an instrument approach to Albany Airport with 48 persons aboard hit at least one home and caused shudders throughout a nearby neighborhood, officials said.

The crash killed the only Mohawk Airlines pilot on board. Two passengers were also killed.

The accident happened at the north end of North Albany Airport, a small airport with no control tower. The plane was a turboprop flying from New York to Washington.

The pilot was identified as Capt. Robert McAdams, 44, of Orange, N.J.

The plane hit the house on North Albany Avenue, a middle-class neighborhood.

About 8:50 p.m., someone saw a white panel truck racing through the backyard and the house exploded, witnesses said. A bystander saw the plane apparently flying through the backyard, then seeing the house burning, ran from the scene.

The crash site was in a two-story home that sat along a tree-lined street in a middle-class neighborhood.

The first floor of the Rosen home was shattered to 20 feet off its foundation.

Rosen, 43, his wife Marcia, 35, and her sons, 38, of Orange, N.J.

Two children were killed. Three were injured.

People who don't have their telephone numbers published in the directory as do a variety of businesses, home owners, etc., are not unfamiliar with the prospect of an unknown caller making a connection in the hope of finding someone they want to talk to, or maybe even to ask for assistance. Such telephonic encounters can be frustrating and even dangerous.

The unlisted are not alone. Many people who do have their telephone numbers published in the directory do so for a variety of reasons, which; however, can be distilled down to their own telephone number, but in the near future will be assigned a new one.

Unemployment rate slips in February

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national unemployment rate dipped in February, and workers returned to new jobs at a faster pace of about 35 per cent of all unemployed people.

The number of unemployed registered a decline of 2.6 to 3.5 per cent of the labor force for the month of February. The seasonally adjusted rate of the unemployment rate in the month is 3.9 per cent.

The actual number of unemployed workers reached its highest level of 5.4 million, a slightly higher than 3.5 per cent of the labor force.

Mr. Cavett, the national unemployment rate has gone down only a little from 6.3 to 5.4 million people in 1972, although the latest Bureau of Labor Statistics report said this was the highest level of the year.

The length of the average work week in the month of February was 33.5 hours, the same as in New York City and the Midwest. The length of the average work week in the month of February was 33.5 hours, the same as in New York City and the Midwest.

MADISON, WIS.—Four state library systems have received provisional certification under a new Wisconsin library system program established by the Wisconsin Assembly's joint committee on state agencies.

The four systems include the Eau Claire County Library System, the La Crosse County Library System, the Marathon County Library System, and the Vilas County Library System. Each system received a 95% rating on the evaluation form.

The Wisconsin library system program is designed to improve library services throughout the state by establishing a statewide system of libraries.
WASHINGTON (AP) - With most of the unknowns yet to be seen, a Senate Judiciary Committee investigation has just begun into the committee's nomination of Edward W. Kennedy, D-Mass., as a Supreme Court justice.

Kennedy's nomination is expected to generate more controversy than his predecessor, John Paul Stevens, because of Kennedy's close ties to the Senate's liberal wing and his role as a lead sponsor of the campaign to impeach President Nixon.

The committee held its first hearing Monday morning with the senator from Massachusetts under questioning from Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

Thurmond, the Senate's most conservative member, questioned Kennedy about the recent resignation of the Justice Department's top lawyer, who had been appointed by President Nixon.

Kennedy responded that he had no intention of leaving his Senate seat if confirmed and that he would not discuss any possible candidates to replace him.

Thurmond, who described himself as a strong supporter of the president, asked Kennedy if he was aware of any covert operations or illegal activities during the president's administration.

Kennedy said he had not been involved in any such matters and that he was unaware of any such activity.

The hearing continued without further interruption.

Kennedy, who is 56, has been a member of the Senate since 1962 and has served on the Judiciary Committee.

He is well respected by both Democrats and Republicans for his intelligence and his ability to work across the aisle.

His nomination is expected to be controversial because of his close ties to the Senate's liberal wing and his role as a lead sponsor of the campaign to impeach President Nixon.

The committee has been trying to decide whether to recommend Kennedy for confirmation to the Senate as a whole, or to delay the vote until after the November elections.

The committee's majority leader, Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., has said that he will support Kennedy's nomination if it is made by the Senate.

However, Sen. James S.岳, R-Mo., the committee's minority leader, has said that he will oppose Kennedy's nomination unless he is satisfied that the senator is not involved in any illegal activities.

The hearings are expected to continue through the week, with the committee scheduled to vote on Kennedy's nomination next Monday.

Movie rating code changed for clarity

By CAROLYN KOSIDOWSKI

The Parental Movie Association of America has recently announced a change in the symbols used in its rating system. The previously used criteria for rating films has been changed to the MPAA (Motion Picture Association of America). The new system will give parents a clearer idea about what types of content are present in a film.

The MPAA changed the criteria for rating films because of complaints from parents and children about the old system. The new system will be easier for parents to understand and will help children know what types of content are present in a film.

The new system uses the following ratings:

- G: General audience
- PG: Parental guidance
- PG-13: Parental guidance
- R: Rating
- NC-17: Not recommended for children
- X: For adults only

The new system will help parents and children make better choices about which films to see. It will also help children understand what types of content are present in a film.

The new system will be implemented in all theaters across the country. It is hoped that this will help parents and children make better choices about which films to see.

Additional information needed, parents agree

Reaction mixed on value of movie ratings

The ratings of movies are made by the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA). The ratings are based on the content of the movie, such as violence, language, and sexual content. The ratings are then sent to theaters, so that parents can make informed decisions about which movies to allow their children to see.

Parents and children have different opinions about the value of movie ratings. Some parents think that the ratings are helpful in making decisions about which movies to see, while others think that the ratings are not always accurate.

The ratings are not always accurate because the content of a movie can vary from showing to showing. In addition, the content of a movie can change from day to day, depending on the audience.

Despite these concerns, the ratings are still a valuable tool for parents and children. The ratings help parents and children make better decisions about which movies to see.

The ratings are also important for directors and producers. They want to make sure that their movies are respectful to children and their families. The ratings help them achieve this goal.

In conclusion, despite the mixed reaction to the ratings, they are still a valuable tool for parents and children. The ratings help parents and children make better decisions about which movies to see.

She's there to help you.
One minister or two for this wedding?

DEAR ABBY: First a young college couple wrote saying they had brought their town church, but her parents felt it would not be right to do it your way. "It doesn't seem to bother anyone that airplanes have only one bathroom for both men and women, so what is all the fuss about? ANOTHER TRANSVESTITE"

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the man who enjoys dressing as a woman. He and his family are upset, and feel his objections — in fact, they often want to change and then let his parents into the secret. How can I advise?

DEAR ABBY: My sister thought she was going to be married later in the year. She was saved at the last minute, and a new partner was好像 something to work with. She is now happily married to a good man.

DEAR ABBY: First a young college couple wrote saying they had brought their church building in order to get people into it, but their problem was this: "We are in Montana, and we are anxious to burst into the new season's first blossoms."

George Carlin Interview

If you’ve never seen George Carlin on television lately you may be wondering what happened. His appearance on the flip side of the coin seems to be his habit of saying what he’s thinking. If you’ve never overheard him, you’re probably not sure what’s happening, but if you’ve ever talked to someone who’s seen him, you’re not surprised. Carlin has a broad range of topics that he’s willing to discuss, from politics to religion. His approach is always the same: he tells the truth, whether it’s what the audience wants to hear or not.

Q. George Carlin, you’re really in trouble with the government. Are you afraid of what they might do to you?

A. I’ve never been afraid of the government. I’ve always been afraid of what they might do to me.

Q. What do you think of the federal government?

A. Well, I think it’s a terrible idea. It’s a system that rewards people who don’t work and punishes people who do.

Q. You’ve spoken out against the war in Vietnam. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

A. I don’t think it will hurt me. I think it will hurt the country.

Q. You’ve also spoken out against the war in Korea. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

A. I don’t think it will hurt me. I think it will hurt the country.

Q. You’ve been involved in the civil rights movement. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

A. I don’t think it will hurt me. I think it will hurt the country.

Q. You’ve also been involved in the peace movement. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

A. I don’t think it will hurt me. I think it will hurt the country.

Q. You’ve been involved in the anti-war movement. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

A. I don’t think it will hurt me. I think it will hurt the country.

Q. You’ve been involved in the anti-Vietnam War movement. Do you think that will hurt you in the future?

Donaldson trout shows promise

'SupertROUT' set for state waters

In this age of space boones, it is only fitting that the greatest fish and wildlife resource of the Northwest is a project remarkable of its kind. Have you heard of the 'Super-TROUT' project of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources?

The 'Super-TROUT' project is the brainchild of Donaldson trout development. The goal of this program is to develop a hybrid trout strain which will be able to grow faster and be more disease-resistant. The project is based on the principle of super-select egg collection, which involves the selection of the best eggs from the best parents to be used for future generations.

In recent months, these eggs have been carefully selected to ensure the highest quality of fish. The goal is to produce a strain of trout that will grow faster and be more disease-resistant. The project is funded by a grant from the USDA and is a joint effort between the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and the University of Minnesota.

The 'Super-TROUT' project is expected to result in a faster-growing fish which will greatly enhance the quality of fishing in Minnesota. In fact, it is estimated that the new strain of trout will grow twice as fast as the current strain, allowing anglers to enjoy the fruits of their labor for a longer period of time.

If you would like to learn more about the 'Super-TROUT' project, or if you would like to participate in the project, you can contact the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources at (651) 289-1300. Together, we can ensure a better future for Minnesota's fishing resources.

Baloney secret of this firm's success

By NANCY SODOTA

ARDEN, Minn. — A business which has made headline news in recent years with good reason celebrated its 60th anniversary as an Arcadia firm Wednesday.

A woman who helped launch the firm in 1912, remembers it as a small enterprise when it was established as the Arcadia Meat Market. The firm grew slowly for many years, and was at one time a specialty of Arcadia, specializing in the sale of fresh meat and fish.

Following the war years and the return of Arcadia's two sons, Harold and Lyman, from the service, the firm expanded in size and scope.

The firm is now a leading meat wholesaler in the state, and its products are sold throughout the country.

SPRING GROVE LIVESTOCK MARKET

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The government has approved a plan to sell the historic Spring Grove Livestock Market, which has been closed for more than a decade.

The market, located in the heart of the city, has been used for livestock sales and auctions since it opened in 1910.

The government plans to transfer ownership of the market to a private entity, which will be responsible for preserving the building and its historical significance.

The plan was announced by the Department of Agriculture, which has been working on the project for several years.

The market was previously owned by the federal government and closed in 2000 due to budget constraints.

Since then, it has sat vacant and deteriorated, prompting concerns about its future.

The new owner will be expected to renovate the building and maintain it as a public place for livestock sales and auctions.

The government said it expects the sale to be completed within the next year.

The property is valued at $25 million.

The market has played a significant role in the city's history, serving as a center for the livestock industry and a popular destination for visitors.

It is located near the National Mall and is adjacent to several other historic landmarks.

The government hopes that the sale will allow the market to be preserved and continue to serve the community.

The market has a rich history and has been the site of many significant events over the years.

It has hosted the annual National Christmas Tree Lighting ceremony and has been featured in several films and TV shows.

The government said it looked forward to seeing the market restored and its potential for future use.

Snakes more interesting to observe

Plainview teacher says of ‘roommates’

—The Plainview (Minn.) Teacher—

UNUSUAL PETS—Jerry Pruett, a chemistry teacher at Plainview, Minn., recently received a boa constrictor as a class pet so the students could observe its habits and behavior.

The constrictor is not a pet in the usual sense, but a boa constrictor, an anaconda, and an indigo snake.

The boa constrictor, which is close to six feet in length, is kept in a cage in the basement apartment of Pruett, who majored in biology at the University of Minnesota.

The main thing snakes are not slimy, but dry, and have a rough texture, Pruett said. While the snakes were at the school for a day, they were not too much care involved and quite interesting to observe. The students and faculty were allured to the recent proposal to include additional property tax relief, which was strongly opposed by nursing home operators who favored the present reimbursement rate and allow savings and loan associations to incorporate nursing homes.

The Assembly passed 95-1 over the objections authority to incorporate nursing homes. It would also double existing authority to incorporate savings and loan associations. The bill would not be a basic change in the existing law, but would help in the insurance companies and brokers to offer risk assessment.
