18-year-old adulthood becomes law

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Like March, the debate over whether 18-year-olds should be able to make their own decisions is heating up. In March, a bill was introduced that would allow 18-year-olds to vote, get married and enter into binding contracts. The bill was sponsored by State Rep. John Kolar, a Democrat from Madison. He said the bill would make it easier for young people to make decisions about their futures. "The bill is a step in the right direction," Kolar said. "It will allow 18-year-olds to make decisions about their lives, instead of having them made for them." The bill was introduced in March, and it was passed in July. The law went into effect in October. It's too early to tell how much of an impact the law will have, but supporters say it will give 18-year-olds more voice in their lives. "This is a big step in the right direction," said one supporter. "It's something that's been a long time coming." The law has been met with mixed reactions. Some people are worried that it will lead to more irresponsible decisions, while others think it's a good thing. The debate over 18-year-old adulthood continues. It's a complex issue, and there are no easy answers. But one thing is certain: the law gives 18-year-olds more freedom to make their own decisions.
Are cooperatives doing too well?

Farmers have always cherished the belief that they are at the mercy of three forces: 1. the weather, and 2. the market, and 3. the government. They have tried to avoid doing something about it. The National Farmers Organization has negotiated contracts with diagnostics companies, and members have been trying to contract for a better price advantage.

EARLIER, farmers organized a variety of cooperatives to better buy and sell their crops. Now, the new group of cooperatives is looking at buying for the benefit of the farmers and that means negotiating a better price.

Researchers have noted that when farmers get together, they can negotiate better prices. The cooperative movement has become a powerful tool for negotiation.

As a farmer sees national growth

Each week, the agricultural cooperative movement grows larger and stronger. It is an organization that represents the interests of farmers and is dedicated to improving the economic situation of farmers.

Unusual arrangement in Cape Cod

By ANDY LANG

This is a Cape Cod with a twist.

The customary layout of a Cape Cod has a living room, dining room, kitchen and two bedrooms on the first floor, with two additional sleeping rooms on the attic floor. This one has the same upstairs bedrooms, but only one downstairs bedroom — in the study.

On the main floor, in addition to bedrooms, living rooms and kitchen, are a family room and a screened porch. The owner-downstairs bedroom has a split bath, with a half bath in the family room, and a full bath in the study.

Although this is the first Cape Cod, on the attic floor, to have a bedroom, it is not the first to have a study. A study has been added to many Cape Cod homes as an extra bedroom, and the first one in a Cape Cod to have a study was built in the 1950s.

But this is the first Cape Cod to have a study, not just as a bedroom, but also as an extra living room. This study has a fireplace and a cathedral ceiling, and a window that looks out on the front porch.

A new feature in the exterior design is the recessed entryway, which is made of stone, and leads to the living room. This entryway is flanked by two bedrooms on the first floor, and provides a partially shielded approach.

The kitchen is in a good location, should the homemaker do some of the clothes drying either in the garage or in the sunny rear yard. There is generous storage and a covered area. A special purchase sale-priced at urethane finish. Choice of two shades:

Fights for survival in Congress

U.S. propaganda agency is busy everywhere

By T. H. ROYANTE

Washington (AP) — A Carter administration official said the U.S. propaganda agency is ready to fight for survival in Congress after the House of Representatives voted to cut its budget by 10 per cent.

The House rejected a bill to cut USIA's budget,
which was proposed by a bipartisan group of congressional leaders. The decision came as USIA officials scrambled to defend the agency against a budget cut that would reduce its funding by more than 15 percent.

The agency's budget is under threat due to the increasingly tense relationship between the United States and its allies, particularly in the Middle East. USIA is responsible for disseminating American values and policies to the world, but its resources are being stretched thin by the demands of a new era of global conflict.

USIA officials are working tirelessly to prevent the agency from being cut, but they admit that the agency is facing a difficult battle.

The agency's director, Nicholas Burns, said
USIA is a vital tool in the fight against terrorism and extremism, and that its work is more important than ever.

The decision to cut USIA's budget comes after a series of high-profile incidents in the Middle East, including the attack on the US diplomatic mission in Libya and the rise of the Islamic State organization. USIA has been accused of failing to communicate effectively with the American public about the severity of the threat.

But Burns defended USIA's work, saying the agency is doing its best to adapt to the new reality of global conflict.

"We know we have to be more creative in how we approach our work," Burns said. "We are working hard to find new ways to reach people around the world and explain our values to them.

But the reality is that we are underfunded and overstretched. We need more resources to do the job that needs to be done."
It was no show by all candidates at 3rd District JFK dinner

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) - Although only 300 guests but 400 invited to a "Clean Air, Yes President, and Candidate" dinner, it was no assembly of the presidential hopefuls as candidates gathered around. The 300 JFK supporters were divided into three sections. Two sections sat to the right of the stage, the other group to the left.

The JFK assembly of 300 JFK supporters included nearly all the major candidates. The section on the middle left was composed of candidates who supported JFK. The right side of the stage was reserved for candidates who supported other candidates. It was a gathering of major candidates who never did grasp the idea that they should be running.

BOSTON (AP) - Phil Esposito became the first to score 500 goals and add 100 assists during the season as the Bruins defeated the North Stars 7-3 on Sunday as the Bruins defeated the North Stars 7-3 on Sunday. Esposito snapped the record of 500 goals scored by Boston Bruins, set a league record, 500 goals on a power play, and the Boston Bruins, set a league record for the most goals scored in a season.

In his brief Goldberg argued that the reserve was both unnecessary and any change should be made with the impartiality.

While it was not an artistic achievement, Esposito said after the game, "I don't know how much fun this is."

Unfortunately, the Bruins could not pull the game out of the hole and scored only 10 goals on the power play. Esposito was asked if he would have been able to break the record earlier in the season.

"I don't know how much fun this is," the coach said, "but it's nice to break the record."
