British takeover in N. Ireland threatens civil war

London commission to govern

By ROYDEN FOSTER

LONDON (AP) — The British government took over the government of Northern Ireland today, ending 14 years of local rule.

Prime Ministers Edward Heath told the House of Commons that Northern Ireland's provincial council resigned earlier today, handing power to a seven-member commission appointed by London and headed by Sir William Whitelaw, the British secretary of state for Northern Ireland.

In an address to the House of Commons last month, Heath had promised that Britain would take over the government of Northern Ireland this summer. But the council resisted the transfer of power to London, and the British government decided to take control of the province.

Heath stressed that the new commission was a temporary measure. He called it a "short-term solution" that would allow the British government to deal with the political and economic problems facing the province.

The new commission was appointed to govern Northern Ireland until elections can be held to establish a new provincial council. The commission will be responsible for running the province and dealing with the political crisis.

The British government has faced criticism for its handling of the Northern Ireland crisis. Many people have accused the government of using the province as a testing ground for political policies.

Richardson defends Nixon plan

By JOE BALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary Elliot L. Richardson stressed on Wednesday that the Nixon administration's new desegregation policy would be only a "last resort." But he acknowledged that the policy could be reviewed in the future.

Richardson was responding to a question from a reporter about the policy's potential impact on schools and students. He said that the policy would be reviewed in the future, and that it could be changed if necessary.

The policy would allow schools and students to remain segregated if they choose. It would also allow schools to receive federal aid for their programs.

"We are not in a position to say whether this policy is going to work," Richardson said. "We are going to have to find out how it works in practice."

The 43-stone quarry near the city of Wabasha will be torn down in the near future. The county will use the land for a park and other purposes. The quarry is located off Highway 43, north of Wabasha, and will be replaced by a new quarry near the city limit. The new quarry will be used to supply stone for the city's construction projects.

County court system to beased on letter topic

The Wabasha County Board of Commissioners was told Thursday that the county will consider the possible merger of the county court system with the city court system. The board was told that the county court system is in need of reorganization and that the city court system is also in need of reform.

Zoning code variance request is withdrawn

A petition for a variance to build a new residence in the city of Wabasha was denied by the county board. The petition was denied because the new residence would be built on a property that has been rezoned for commercial use.

City begins flood route preparations

City officials have begun making plans for the possible flooding of the Mississippi River. The city has established a flood preparedness committee to work on flood preparedness plans.

Formal decision-making may come soon on city master plan

City Planning Director Charles R. Adams said that the city's master plan will be completed soon. The city has been working on the master plan for several years and has been gathering public input on the plan.

Wallace opens bid in Wisconsin by calling tax reform key issue

The Arizona governor said his former political rivals in the Wisconsin gubernatorial race have not taken tax reform seriously enough.

"The people of Wisconsin deserve one more look at tax reform," Wallace said. "I've been talking about tax reform for the last two years. I've been trying to make sure everyone understands the importance of tax reform."

"I'm not saying that tax reform is the only issue, but it is a very important issue," Wallace added. "I think it's something that needs to be discussed in more detail."

Wallace said he believes that a tax reform plan should be developed that will help to reduce the burden on Americans. He said that his plan would be focused on providing relief for middle-class families and businesses.

Wallace also made a point about the importance of education and the need for increased funding for schools.

"Education is critical to the success of any society," he said. "We need to ensure that our children have access to quality education and that our teachers are well-compensated."

Wallace said he believes that his tax reform plan would be beneficial to the state and the country as a whole.

"I believe that this plan will help to create a more prosperous future for all Americans," he concluded. "I'm proud to be a part of this important discussion and I look forward to continuing to work towards a better future for all."

WASHINGTON — The United States is: prepared to meet any challenge Russia may decide to make, President Richard Nixon announced today at a press conference. Nixon spoke after a two-hour meeting with Prime Minister Leonid Brezhnev in which the two leaders discussed problems common to all mankind.

"Having listened to the Prime Minister and my countrymen, I can tell you that we are prepared to meet any challenge Russia may decide to make," the President said. "We have done our best to make clear to the Russian leaders that we are prepared to meet any challenge they may decide to make."

The President's statement was made in the wake of the President's Moscow visit, during which he and Brezhnev discussed economic and political issues. The two leaders issued a joint statement after their meeting, which was widely interpreted as a sign of increased Soviet-American cooperation.

The President's comments came as tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union had been increasing in recent months. The President's visit to Moscow was seen as a means of trying to缓和紧张局势，但结果如何尚须观察。

DEAR ABBY: I don’t enjoy going to X-rated movies. My husband thinks I am. He asked me to go to one of those movies with him and I didn’t. I don’t want to, either. I don’t like the way people get dressed up in costume and act silly. I just can’t believe some people can just go to a theater and enjoy this type of entertainment.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the propriety of asking a hostess, when she invites you to dinner, "Who else is coming?" I don’t think it’s impolite to ask. I always do. And it’s a nice way to find out how many people will be there, so you can plan to go there or not.

DEAR ABBY: Please publish this. We know this would take several hours, so we helped.

DEAR ABBY: My husband says it turns him on. Well, it turns me OFF! Do you think I should go to sexy movies with him just to keep him company? I find them humiliating.

DEAR ABBY: I don’t think it’s impolite to ask. It can be a nice way to find out how many people will be there, so you can plan to go there or not.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I decided to go to a movie theater and find out what was being shown. We asked the usher if we could see the show program by first, second and third class. He said yes.

Some men look to the heavens and only see new worlds to explore. Other men see God’s handiwork. Some witness scientific and medical achievements and see evidence of the genius of man. Still others see what a God-given talent can accomplish.

Some men look at poverty and misery and see their proof that God is dead. And no wonder, for such men, life is merely something to be endured from birth to death. For them, life holds no excitement... no hope. These men are up to their necks in a sea of despair. They are drowning in their ocean of self-pity. There is another group who witness the same poverty and misery and see proof that life without God is life at all. They find life a challenge, a chance to serve God by fulfilling the Great Commission. These men are up to their necks in the service of God. They go out of their way every day, to extend a helping hand and say, God cares.
Moral supervision of Navy chaplains nears showdown

BY GEORGE M. CAMERON
NEW YORK (AP) — A significant step toward Nixon administration negotiations with the Navy over the near future of naval chaplains, who have already rejected unionization, was taken this week when the Justice Department announced that it would not seek to block a plan for the introduction of a new pay system for the Navy.

The move follows a decision by the Justice Department last week to allow the Navy to proceed with the plan, which involves the introduction of a new pay system for the Navy. The new pay system is designed to provide a more equitable distribution of pay among the different ranks and grades of the Navy, and is intended to address some of the criticism that the current pay system is unfair and discriminatory.

The announcement is significant because it marks the first time that the Justice Department has allowed a major change in the Navy's pay system to proceed without a legal challenge. It is also the first time that the Justice Department has allowed a major change in the Navy's pay system to proceed without a legal challenge.

The move by the Justice Department is expected to be welcomed by the Navy, which has been seeking to introduce a new pay system for several years. The Navy has been hampered by a lack of funding and a lack of support from Congress, but the Justice Department's decision is likely to provide the Navy with the necessary momentum to move forward with its plans.

The new pay system is expected to be implemented over the next few years, and is expected to be accompanied by a number of other changes to the Navy's personnel policies. These changes are expected to include a new system for promoting officers, a new system for handling sexual harassment allegations, and a new system for handling allegations of racial discrimination.

The moves by the Justice Department are expected to be welcomed by a number of groups, including the American Federation of Government Employees, which represents the Navy's civilian employees, and the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, which represents the Navy's military personnel.

The move by the Justice Department is also expected to be welcomed by the Navy's top brass, who have been pushing for a new pay system for several years. The Navy has been seeking to introduce a new pay system for several years, but has been hampered by a lack of funding and a lack of support from Congress.

The Justice Department's decision is expected to provide the Navy with the necessary momentum to move forward with its plans. The Navy has already begun planning for the implementation of the new pay system, and is expected to begin implementing it over the next few years.
Humphrey expected to get just over half of state delegates

By GERRY NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Hubert H. Humphrey is expected to receive a stronger delegate showing at the upcoming national Democratic convention than he did at the 1968 convention, according to the latest delegate count released by the national committee.

The count, released to the news media late Thursday, showed Humphrey with 1,200 delegates, or about 60% of the total. The count is based on results from primaries and caucuses held in the states and territories.

Humphrey, the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, is expected to face a strong challenge from former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, who is seeking a third term in the Senate.

The next delegate count is expected to be released next week.
