HHH has outperformed rival on tax-reform question

By GERRY NELSON

Minneapolis — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy has outperformed his rivals in gaining support for a presidential run, and aides to the late President John F. Kennedy are using Kennedy's political achievements to tout their candidate's credentials.

Kennedy's campaign is trying to appeal to the Democratic party's base by linking Kennedy's efforts in Washington to his father's legacy. The campaign is highlighting Kennedy's role in passing the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and his efforts to promote civil rights and social justice policies.

Kennedy's campaign is also using the election of 1968 as a benchmark for measuring Progressives' support. The campaign is emphasizing Kennedy's role in winning that election and his efforts to build a grassroots movement.

Kennedy's campaign is also attempting to establish a more personal connection with voters by highlighting Kennedy's family background and his close relationship with his father. The campaign is highlighting Kennedy's role in helping to elect his father to the Senate in 1958 and his efforts to build a family political dynasty.

Kennedy's campaign is also attempting to create a more positive image for the Democratic party by highlighting the contributions of President Lyndon B. Johnson. The campaign is emphasizing Johnson's role in passing the Civil Rights Act of 1968 and his efforts to protect the rights of African Americans.

Winona, Wabasha court systems likely to split

By STEVE P. JOHNSON

New York Times

Winona and Wabasha court systems likely will be split when the state supreme court rules on a reapportionment. Winona, a county court, and Wabasha, a district court, are in a split court system. The two counties are expected to have their own court systems by summer, although they do not have the capacity for a separate court system.

The two counties are combining their court systems into one single court system. This is due to the increasing number of cases coming through the two counties.

The FHA 236 program is a boon or a bane? It is a subsidy for commercial developers and a benefit for the state, but it is also a cause of concern for some residents.

The FHA 236 program is designed to help commercial developers by providing tax benefits to those who participate in the program. This can help reduce the costs associated with building and maintaining housing developments.

New York still has parties

Saturday night. New York parties are both slightly old-fashioned and slightly new-fashioned. When Collins hired his restaurant, one of the requirements was that it be in the same building as the famous Cafe Society. The restaurant was named after the late Joe E. Brown, who was a close friend of Collins'.

The restaurant was decorated with murals of Brown's favorite tunes and pictures of his friends. The menu featured dishes such as the Cafe Society Salad, which consisted of orange and olive salad with a vinaigrette dressing.

The restaurant was a hit from the start, and it quickly became a popular destination for the city's elite. It was often frequented by the likes of Frank Sinatra, Marilyn Monroe, and Aristotle Onassis.

As the years went by, the Cafe Society Restaurant continued to thrive. It was considered one of the most exclusive places to eat in New York City, and its clientele included many of the city's most famous people. Today, the Cafe Society Restaurant remains a beloved institution, and it continues to attract visitors from all over the world who are interested in the history and culture of New York City.

Goodbye to nature

I would like to thank my good friend, the president of this newspaper, for allowing me to take this time to discuss with you the suspension of Stormont. I would like to talk about the suspension of Stormont and the reasons behind it.

In terms of the suspension of Stormont, there are several factors that have contributed to its suspension. One of the main factors is the lack of public support. The people of Stormont are not in favor of the suspension of Stormont, and this has been reflected in the elections.

Another factor is the lack of resources. The government has been unable to allocate enough resources to the suspension of Stormont, which has made it difficult to carry out the necessary work.

Finally, there is the issue of the impact on the environment. The suspension of Stormont will have a negative impact on the environment, and this is something that we need to take into consideration.

In conclusion, I would like to thank you for listening to my concerns about the suspension of Stormont. I hope that the government will take the necessary steps to address these issues and that Stormont can continue to function properly.

Ultimate expectations of Christian faith

"Hope's work is to apprise humankind of the importance of a new theological wavering on the meaning and content of the Christian faith. This document proposes a way to understand the present crisis of Christian faith by the ardent utmost excellence for man that if it goes, the faith goes.

The recurring vision of the Kingdom of God is a hallmark of the new theology, but of Christianity, says Catholic philosopher Louis Lechler, to anticipate, to trust in the "good fight," St. Paul called it, although some have seen it as 'a Utopia' and a "Holy Land," toward a true life, a new earth, and a new heaven.

The statement of the impossible, the "impossible context of life is succor to human endeavor, to anticipate, to trust in the "good fight," St. Paul called it, although some have seen it as 'a Utopia' and a "Holy Land," toward a true life, a new earth, and a new heaven.

Mayo Clinic ready to open undergraduate medical school

By JOHN LEMMENS

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) - The Mayo Clinic is ready to open an undergraduate medical school here next fall to an undergraduate class of 40 students.

The school, starting with a class of 40 students, plans to add 24 new students each of the next two years. Graduates will take four years.

The UMDH training program, which began three years ago, was created to provide a second-year setting that doctors of tomorrow can use to prepare themselves for the long-term care of patients.

The curriculum divides basic sciences into two categories. Groups 1-5 students have in a primary care setting, while Groups 6-10 students have in a primary care setting.

This was a recent interaction in the Mayo clinic, where Dr. James D. Smith is the director of education of the Mayo Foundation.

The Mayo Clinic, America's first home for the horse-and-buggy doctor, William Worrall Mayo, laid the cornerstone for the Mayo Medical School building in 1911 at a cost of $178,000 by the Mayo Foundation and director for education, Dr. James D. Smith.

The rural clinic, located at a rural clinic, is serviced by a nurse and a staff of 50 medical students.

Two of these students are in the Mayo Division of rural medicine, which is associated with developments in rural medicine, notes that the Mayo Foundation's rural medicine program is one of the most successful in the United States.

Boling outside the prison was the last place anyone would expect to find a community center. But a group of community leaders in Wabasha, Minn., has created such a center on the outside of the prison, the Prison Industrial Reform Training Organization (PORT).

The housing facilities for PORT and the prison are separate, but the two are connected by a tunnel. The prison is not associated with the housing facility, but the two are under the same management.

The隧道 is used by prisoners to commute to and from the prison. There are no barriers between the two facilities, and prisoners are free to move back and forth as they please.

Many changes in planting intentions

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Minnesota farmers have made some significant adjustments in 1972 planting plans since January and will cut more than 200,000 acres or a percent of the total acreage in the seven major field crops, says Joe World, agriculture economist.

Continued depressed corn prices and fallow of distempered corn plants led to increased oilseed production by Minnesota farmers. world said. The forecast of this year's harvest of 25 percent less than that grown in 1971 in corn, soybeans, and barley has provided farmers with an increased opportunity to use the available land for oilseed crops, which also are more profitable than corn. World noted.

The Idaho Natural Resources and Conservation Department recently predicted farmers in that state would increase their acreage of oilseed crops by about 7 percent for the coming growing season. World said this increase is expected to be mainly in soybeans, which were marketed at a premium price this season.

Atrazine residue causes problems

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz said yesterday that the application of herbicide atrazine must be stopped to prevent its contamination of groundwater resources. Secretary Butz announced he would direct the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to take steps to prevent the contamination of groundwater and other bodies of water by atrazine.

The use of atrazine is not uncommon in many parts of the country and has been widely used in crops throughout the United States. However, it is important to note that the use of atrazine is not allowed in areas where it has been found to cause contamination of groundwater resources.

New agency in Department of Agriculture

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz announced yesterday that the Department of Agriculture will establish an independent regulatory agency to monitor and oversee the use of pesticides and other chemicals. The new agency will be called the Pesticide and Chemical Control Agency (PCCA).

The new agency will have the authority to set standards for the use of pesticides and other chemicals, to conduct research on the effects of these chemicals on human health and the environment, and to enforce regulations designed to protect the public and the environment.

Corn and soybeans are still the leading crops in the United States, but there has been a decline in the use of these crops in recent years. This is due to a decrease in the demand for these crops and an increase in the use of other crops such as oilseeds.

The new agency in the Department of Agriculture will have the authority to set standards for the use of pesticides and other chemicals, to conduct research on the effects of these chemicals on human health and the environment, and to enforce regulations designed to protect the public and the environment.
