Anderson disappointed with ruling by court

Mankato, Minn. — State officials here said yesterday that the state of Minnesota will appeal a federal court decision yesterday that bars them from refusing to license a nuclear power plant unless its safety is proven.

The U.S. district court in St. Paul yesterday indefinitely extended a temporary restraining order that barred the state from refusing to license the Minnesota Power & Light Co. plant at Monticello, Minn., on the Mississippi River.

The court’s decision, which was expected to be upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, bars the state from enforcing a law that requires the state Atomic Energy Commission to license plants only if the plant is located in a safe area.

The state had sought to prevent the plant from being built until the state’s nuclear power plant is located in a safe area. The state has been involved in a series of legal actions to prevent the plant from being built.

U.S. notice to Hanoi —

Pressure won’t bring peace

By SPENCER DAVIS

Washington (AP) — The United States is sending thousands of new troops to Vietnam to help the South Vietnamese win or lose the war.

The U.S. government has confirmed that the offensive proves the North Vietnamese want to achieve a military victory.

The United States has been providing the South Vietnamese forces with billions of dollars in aid, but has not been providing enough troops to help the South Vietnamese win the war.

Highway trust fund dispute continuing

The argument goes on whether highway dollars are being used in the most cost-effective manner, with the Federal-Aid Highway Program held up as a model of how transportation fund conflicts should be resolved.

It is a discussion that occurs both at state and local levels, as well as in national forums. The FHWA, which is responsible for overseeing the trust fund, has faced criticism from various quarters for its handling of the issue.

The FHWA has acknowledged the problem and has taken steps to address it, including the introduction of a new funding model that aims to better align federal and state funding priorities.

Although the issue remains contentious, there is a general consensus that solutions need to be found in order to ensure the continued viability of the trust fund and the nation's transportation infrastructure. The challenge lies in finding a balance between the needs of different regions and ensuring that resources are allocated efficiently and effectively.

The Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) is a historical milestone in the fight for women's rights. Its ratification would ensure that women have the right to vote and participate equally in all areas of life, including employment, education, and politics.

The Amendment was passed by Congress in 1972, but was not ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states by the deadline of 1982. While some states have ratified the Amendment, many have not, leading to a continuing debate over its potential impact and the need for further action.

The ERA's ratification would be a significant victory for women's rights advocates and would mark a major step forward in the struggle for gender equality. However, it is important to note that the battle for equal rights is ongoing, and that continued advocacy and action are necessary to ensure that all women have the opportunity to fully participate in society.

King William, a rising star of the political scene, has recently become the focus of much attention due to his bold statements and aggressive policies.

King William's rise to power has been accompanied by a series of controversial decisions, including the implementation of a strict religious code and the suppression of dissenting voices. Despite these actions, King William has maintained a strong following among the masses, who see him as a strong leader who is willing to take bold steps to protect the nation.

However, King William's policies have also faced criticism from some quarters, who argue that they are too radical and threaten the stability of the kingdom. As the political landscape continues to shift, it remains to be seen whether King William will be able to maintain his grip on power or whether he will face challenges from within his own camp.

In conclusion, the political landscape is complex and ever-changing, and King William's rise to power is a testament to the power of leadership and the importance of empowering the masses. As the future unfolds, it will be interesting to see how King William's policies will shape the course of events and what the ultimate outcome will be.

William S. Buckley

The political landscape is constantly evolving, and it is important to stay informed in order to make informed decisions. As a public figure, it is my duty to provide the people with the information they need to make informed decisions and to ensure that their voices are heard in the political process.
Two-phase program

Adopt truck traffic approach

A two-phase approach is proposed in the plans to handle heavy truck traffic in search of residential districts to reduce noise and air pollution. Development of City Hall and the future will be limited to industrial areas and suitable residential districts as much as possible.

The City Council on Wednesday night approved the recommendations of a committee appointed by the council to study the problem. The committee recommended a two-phase program.

In the first phase, a temporary solution, the council will enact an ordinance spelling out definite truck routes. The second phase will provide a belt-line around the city, tentatively plotted to spread over the next four years by various names assumed by city schools and the names that have been used.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Federal officials say that investigations have discovered extensive illegal trade in furs and hides, including an alleged multi-million-dollar operation involving alligator hides from the southeastern states.

"We have evidence of a vast black market in wildlife," said a report released by the Department of the Interior.

The report said that more than 110 indictments have been filed against individuals and corporations accused of violating the Endangered Species Act.

"The black market in wildlife is a significant threat to the survival of many species," said Dr. Raymond W. Hoecker, chief of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Hoecker said that the black market is fueled by the demand for exotic skins, which are used in fashion and decorative items.

"We are committed to shutting down this illegal trade and bringing justice to those who profit from the illegal wildlife trade," Hoecker said.

The report also highlighted the impact of the black market on the economy.

"The illegal trade in wildlife is a significant economic drain on our country," said Interior Secretary William P. Rogers.

The report called for increased enforcement and funding to combat the illegal wildlife trade.

"We need to invest more in our wildlife law enforcement agencies," Rogers said.

The report also called for increased public awareness and education about the impact of the illegal wildlife trade on wildlife populations and the environment.

"We need to educate the public about the dangers of the illegal wildlife trade," said Rogers.

The report concluded with a call for international cooperation to combat the illegal wildlife trade.

"We need to work with our international partners to stop this illegal wildlife trade," Rogers said.

Silicone girl's answer to her sagging dreams

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is about my age. About five years ago she had her breasts lifted. One night my friend visited my house, and when she left, I was so impressed with her breasts that I told her so. She asked if she could make some copies of my photo album, which I obliged. Later, when I saw the photo album, I was amazed to see that my friend had used my photos to illustrate her breasts. I was so shocked that I didn't know what to say.

DEAR ABBY: Now I have heard of silicone implants to lift up sagging breasts, but I have never heard of anyone using it to lift up sagging breasts and then using it to make copies of your photos. I think this is a violation of copyright law.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I am concerned about the use of silicone implants to lift up sagging breasts. I think this is a violation of copyright law. I would like to know if there is anything I can do to stop this practice.

Which fuel is the best?

Court stays order on tree school busing

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — The Vermont Supreme Court on Monday halted a tree school busing order Monday that had been issued last week by a state administrative law judge who decided the county school board had no right to set aside a busing order.

The board had appealed the order to the state's highest court, which had granted a stay of the order until Monday. The court stayed the order, saying it was invalid.

The decision by the court on Monday was its first on the issue since last week's decision by the administrative law judge. The judge had ruled the board had no right to set aside the order, and that the busing of students to tree schools was a valid way to achieve racial integration.

A colleague of mine was looking at the wall of the city hall, where there were rows of historic photos. She pointed out a picture of a man and woman standing next to each other. The man was wearing a suit and tie, while the woman was dressed in a long skirt and blouse. They both had their hands placed on a plaque that said: "In the year 1871, we founded this city..." She said, "Isn't it amazing how much has changed since then?" I nodded in agreement, reflecting on the progress we've made in the past century.

I then turned to the next page of the document, which contained an article about the history of the city. The article mentioned various events and milestones that had shaped the community over the years. It also included quotes from local leaders and residents, who shared their perspectives on the city's future.

As I continued reading, I couldn't help but feel grateful for the opportunities and experiences that this city has offered to its citizens. It was a reminder of how important it is to preserve our history while also looking towards the future with optimism.

The Warriors walked away from a $1,021,000 offer—made in good faith—by the players.

The offer was made by the players’ representatives to the owners of the Northern Intercollegiate Conference basketball team—led by Rich-wood coach Les Wothke.

The offer, which also included play-off profits, was calculated to give the players an $80,000 annum settlement over the next 10 years, with an additional $60,000 for the players to keep.

The players also offered the owners a $150,000 bond for the players’ remaining rights, including the right of first refusal on any new proposals.

The owners rejected the offer, saying they would rather have the players remain without settlement.

Meanwhile, the rains of the Northern Intercollegiate Conference were pouring down, prob-eling the team to open the play-offs this week.
