Reform of Democratic party moves smoothly

By JUAN REICHERT
WASHINGTON (AP) — While
much Democratic party move- ing forward, there is a growing feeling that the pace of change may be too slow.

Three House leaders, including Speaker Thomas S. Foley of Washington state, have said they would support a proposal to change the party's rules to allow for more rapid decision-making.

Foley said the change would help the party move more quickly on key issues, such as health care and immigration.

The proposal would eliminate the need for a two-thirds vote to approve legislation, allowing the party to act more swiftly on important bills.

The Black Hills community will be able to access a new service to help them manage their pedestrian safety.

The service, called "CrossingSafely," is being developed by the South Dakota Department of Transportation and the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

The service will provide real-time data on pedestrian activity, including the number of pedestrians crossing streets, the number of vehicles stopping for pedestrians, and the number of vehicles turning left.

It will also allow for the creation of pedestrian safety zones, where the speed limit is reduced to encourage drivers to slow down and give pedestrians more time to cross.

The service is expected to be operational in 2023 and will be available to residents and visitors of the Black Hills community.

CrossingSafely is a collaborative effort between the South Dakota Department of Transportation, the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, and the Black Hills community.

The community is encouraged to participate in the program and share their experiences and feedback.

The service is funded through a grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Highway Administration.

The Black Hills community is one of 12 communities across the country selected to participate in the program.

CrossingSafely is designed to improve pedestrian safety by reducing the risk of injuries and fatalities.

The service is expected to reduce the number of pedestrian crashes and fatalities by 50%.

The project is being managed by the South Dakota Department of Transportation, with support from the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials and the Black Hills community.

The project is expected to be completed in 2023.

In other news, the Black Hills community has been awarded a grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation to develop a new pedestrian safety program.

The grant will provide $150,000 to the community to help fund the project.

Gross earnings tax should go into the roundhouse

The resolution in Minneapolis has been getting a pretty lively press lately. And rightfully, since it affects such a large part of the nation’s population.

The gross earnings tax, which has been the subject of so much debate and has been proposed by various members of Congress, is a tax on the earnings of individuals, regardless of their occupation or income level. It is designed to be a means of raising revenue for the federal government and to help address the growing fiscal crisis.

However, opponents of the tax argue that it would be unfair to place a tax on individual income, as it would disproportionately affect lower-income workers who earn a smaller percentage of their income than higher-income workers.

The debate over the gross earnings tax is likely to continue, with supporters and opponents on both sides emphasizing different aspects of the issue. Ultimately, the decision on whether to implement the tax will depend on a variety of factors, including the economic climate and the overall fiscal situation of the country.

WASHINGTON -- From President Ford downward, the GOP high command maintains as an article of faith that an electoral victory is the necessary prelude to continued office.

This view, which Washington Republicans want to make the cornerstone of their party’s campaign in 1980, is not shared by the Democratic leaders.

To these Democrats, the Republicans want to make the start of the primary contest possible. But the right-wing insurgency of the last decade was as decisive as it was powerful, and the Democrats’ major goal is to make the nomination contest last.

The party leaders in both parties are determined to make sure that the nomination contest is not over before it starts. They do not want to have another contest like the 1980 primary campaign, which included a March 3rd date for Ohio and New York.

This year, the new primary rules allow for a February contest, but the Democrats are determined to keep the nomination fight going as long as possible.

Feelings of alienation survey

In this era of stability and doubts, feelings of alienation among the American people have risen sharply from 17% in 1965 to 48% in 1972. The Nixon administration is being criticized for its weak efforts to help farmers. The farm program has been "strong on public relations but a terrible predicament" for those who depend on it. The administration has acknowledged that the "beggar my neighbor" policy is the only way to help farmers. The administration is also criticized for its failure to understand the "language of the disenchanted blue-collar worker in his factory town." People are feeling left out of things around them, as the following results indicate: the highest degree of alienation is felt by those who feel left out of the phone book, followed by those who feel left out of the news, and then those who feel left out of the country. Although Senator McGovern and Governor Wallace are running for office, the increases between 1971 and 1972 have been substantial. People who have the power are out to take advantage of you, as the following results indicate: 38% of the people feel that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer. The feeling of alienation runs highest among those under the age of 25, with 53% among those who are for George McGovern, and 39% among those who are for George Wallace. The feeling of alienation has been rising throughout the country.

A 10-cent increase this year reflects an estimated $1.5 million increase in the cost of the program. The increase was absorbed by the federal government, which defrayed more than the cost of the increased benefit.

The President also spoke of his administration’s efforts to improve Medicare. He said that the current bill which involves a $20 million increase in the cost of the program is expected to be the largest one in the history of the nation.

He also spoke of the importance of the program in helping to ensure that older Americans have access to medical care. He said that the program is funded by Medicare beneficiaries and by the federal government, and that it is important that older Americans have access to this care.

He ended his remarks by thanking the audience for their support of Medicare and for their support of the administration’s efforts to improve the program.
CONFIDENT CLEVELAND
cups Westfield title

When Dennis Cleveland dug in the dirt at the site of the 39th annual Westfield Open Golf Tournament in Westfield, Mass., there was little doubt in anyone's mind but the favorites were to win the title.

Cleveland came from the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, and has achieved great accomplishments in his golf career. He was the key player in helping his fellow extramural clubs to win the national championships.

A vice president of the National Golfers Association, Cleveland has been playing golf since he was a young boy. He is considered to be one of the best players in the world, and his performance at the Westfield Open was no exception.

Cleveland played a steady game, shooting under par on 18 of the 18 holes. He finished the tournament with a score of 285, which was 15 strokes under par.

Winning the Westfield Open is just one of Cleveland's many achievements. He is also known for his consistent play, game after game, which has earned him the title of "Mr. Consistency." His victories, from coast to coast, have been well-earned, and his fans have been4

Brewers' losing streak halted

By MIKE O'BRIEN

The Milwaukee Brewers, with a 5-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Sunday, went right back to their winning ways after losing the first two games in the three-game series.

The Brewers, who have been struggling offensively, finally found their rhythm against Royals pitcher Doug Rippel. They scored four runs in the first inning, including a home run by Jim Gantner, and never looked back.

"We had a good game plan going in tonight," said Brewers manager Manny Acta. "We knew Rippel was going to give us some early runs, so we tried to put some pressure on him right from the start. We were able to do that, and it paid off in the end.

"It's good to get back to winning ways," Acta added. "We've been struggling as a team, but tonight we came together and put in a solid performance. We're looking forward to the rest of the series and seeing if we can keep this momentum going."

At Mustache Day

A's provide support, Blue notch 1st win

By BILL BUCK
Associated Press Writer

It was Mustache Day in Cobbs Corners, and, as the saying goes, the folks didn't go nuts for Vida Blue.

Thankfully, only one man in the first 30 batters he faced on Tuesday. Blue ended up winning the game.

The combination of Blue on the mound and, for a change, things didn't get hairy for Vida Blue.

Treated to only one run in the game on Tuesday, Blue notches his 1st win.
