Nixon budget cuts blasted

Chairman Thomas Olson of the House Appropriations Committee said, "The administration has been slow to respond to the complaints," adding, "We have been working with the administration to find solutions to the problems." Olson also said that the hearings are necessary to ensure that the public is informed about the budget cuts and their impact on social services.

Interior Secretary Carl M. Mathias called the hearings "a step forward in the fight to protect the public interest." Mathias added, "We are committed to making sure that the budget cuts do not affect the most vulnerable members of our society."

Reservation residents initiate solution to one Indian demand

Spilhaus still enthusiastic about model city

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — A former University of Minnesota dean who developed the idea for an experimental city in northern Minnesota region is still enthusiastic about the project. “The Experimental City,” a 250,000-resident city, would be located near the town of Two Harbors.

Daniel Spilhaus, 61, said the opposition to the project is shifting. “We are talking to the residents, not the government,” Spilhaus said.

On Monday, a group of residents from the proposed site of the experimental city met with government officials to discuss the project. The meeting was the first of several scheduled for the next few weeks.

How good it is

Winston tastes good when a cigarette should.
How can you stop their spending?

At the very least, the outgoing White House investigation suggests that the Federal Election Commission’s powers of regulation and enforcement have been bypassed.

But the enforcement is less than perfect. And it is a problem that must be solved.

The White House investigation is a good start. But it is not enough.

The problem is one of education, enforcement, and enforcement.

The case of a defector and CIA agent

Last week, John T. Sturges came out from behind the Bamboo Curtain, where he had been a prisoner of the Chinese for 20 years.

The agent had been captured by the Chinese in 1966, when he was a member of the Chinese Foreign Ministry's delegation to Peking.

The Chinese government released him in 1967, after he had written postcards to acquaintances in Washington.

He had been a key figure in the Chinese government's efforts to persuade the United States to acknowledge the Chinese government, which was the first they knew of his return.

The CIA agent frankly admitted to his involvement in counterintelligence operations. This might not be surprising, given the sensitive nature of his work.

He was a defector to the United States.

Separate from the discussion of the release of John T. Downey, in the world of foreign policy, it is clear that the United States has been engaged in a more aggressive approach to counterintelligence operations.

Henry Kissinger was beginning negotiations for the release of a former CIA agent, former Chinese diplomat Henry Hsueh, who had been a prisoner of the Chinese for 20 years, as part of the ongoing diplomatic efforts to normalize relations between the United States and China.

But there is much worse yet.

The seeming change in policy, however, does not appear to be accompanied by any substantive change in the overall strategy of the United States in the region.

Looking up down under—

STUART, Australia — During his brief stay in Australia, Prime Minister Harold Holt spent a few days in Melbourne, where he was expected to conclude his tour of the country.

The prime minister was expected to announce the appointment of a new minister for defense, as well as the possible shift of the defense minister to another portfolio.

The embattled coalition government, which has been in power since last year, is facing a number of political challenges.

Holt's visit to Australia is seen as an opportunity to reassure the conservative electorate that the government is on track.

The prime minister is expected to address the issue of the ongoing Vietnam war, as well as the recently announced increased defense spending.

In Melbourne, the prime minister is expected to hold a press conference to discuss the government's economic policies and the ongoing crisis in Vietnam.

The government faces the challenge of balancing economic stability with increasing defense spending, as well as the ongoing political and economic crisis in Vietnam.

The prime minister is expected to address these issues, as well as the ongoing crisis in Vietnam, in his press conference.

The government is expected to announce a new defense policy, which will likely include increased defense spending and a re-evaluation of the country's military capabilities.

Giveaways and taxes here, in Washington

This seems to be the era of "giveaways." The Democrats seem to be falling all over themselves giving away, while the Republicans are asking for, and getting, all sorts of new taxes. It is, in other applications, as if we are attending a political masquerade ball -- the Democrats are wearing country clothes while the Republicans are wearing ball gowns.

In response to this, I propose to the Democrats a new theory: the "take it or leave it" theory. In this theory, the Democrats make the proposals and the Republicans take them or leave them. If the Republicans don't like the proposals, they must leave them. If they like the proposals, they must take them.

I also propose to the Republicans a new policy: the "take it or leave it" policy. In this policy, the Republicans make the proposals and the Democrats take them or leave them. If the Democrats don't like the proposals, they must leave them. If they like the proposals, they must take them.

This seems to be a fair and equal way of proceeding. It will, I believe, solve the problem of the Democrats giving away and the Republicans getting new taxes.

Sincerely yours,

A REPORT ON IRON MINING IN MINNESOTA

Minneapolis has several industries that are large enough to affect the economy of the state. When their business is healthy, so is the country. And when their business is not healthy, so is the country.

One of these industries is mining, which makes a substantial economic impact on our state... an impact that could increase as taconite attains its full potential. For this reason the iron mining industry of Minnesota makes this report.

Measures Our Mining Industry:

Sales are the present elements of Minnesota's mining industry.

Taconite is one of the main contributors to the state's economy. Minnesota's iron ore production is the third largest in the world.

Employment in the mining industry is naturally steady. The number of jobs in the mining industry is estimated to be around 12,000. Indirectly, the mining industry is estimated to be around 2,000.

Taxation by the state and federal government is the key to getting the new plants in place here.

Why We Don't Produce 65 Million Tons of Taconite Pellets Now

The future, of course, is in taconite, and with all plans going at a near full capacity, we will produce 42,000,000 tons of pellets in 1973. That's less than two-thirds of our potential. Convincing a healthy economy depends on further development to replace jobs being lost in natural iron mining.

A Look at the Competition in Mining

Other iron ore producers have been very busy expanding and developing new iron ore resources. Twenty years ago Minnesota shipped 22 per cent of the world's production. It is 37 per cent today. Due to the discovery and lower production costs in other states, such as Missouri, Pennsylvania, and Wyoming—and other parts of the world, one producer in foreign countries has been able to produce more than we have. It's about 2.5 million tons of iron ore and taconite pellets.

Steel is Changing Too

Also, the past 30 years have seen diverse changes in the steel industry. In 1971 Tilbury produced more steel than the United States, and it is said that the steel industry is about to be replaced. The world's largest shipbuilding company, and the builder of the world's largest ship, has been built by one of the shipbuilders. The shipbuilder's company, a large one, and other parts of the world, are using iron ore from other parts of the world, because it is less expensive.

But the industry has changed, and it is estimated that the use of iron ore from Missouri, Pennsylvania, and Wyoming is increasing. Today, it is estimated that the use of iron ore from these states is 10 per cent more than previously.

In years gone by

(Deduced from the files of the newspaper)

Ten years ago . . . 1963

Let's return to October 1963. The month was a rainy one, as we can see from the weather report in the morning edition of the newspaper. The temperature ranged from a high of 62°F to a low of 48°F, and there was a chance of rain in the forecast. The river was running high, and there were reports of flooding in some areas. The local farmers were busy harvesting their crops, and the schools were closed due to the rain.

Twenty-five years ago . . . 1948

In October 1948, the city was abuzz with news of the local school district, which was preparing for a bond election. The bond would fund the construction of a new elementary school, and the district was hopeful that the voters would approve it. The bond was ultimately passed, and the new school opened its doors in 1950.

Fifty years ago . . . 1923

The Local Chronicle, the local newspaper, published an article in October 1923 about the first school bond election in the city. The bond was approved by the voters, and the new school was built on the site of the old school, which was razed.

One-hundred years ago . . . 1873

The city was in a state of flux in 1873, as the local newspaper reported. The city had recently been incorporated, and there were plans to build a new city hall. The local newspaper also reported on the progress of the local school district, which was building a new school.

The dollar slid to 260.50 yen in bank-to-bank trading on Friday, well above the previous session's change rates of 2.8275 and Friday's 2.82. This is below both Monday's closing of 2.8370 and late Thursday's 2.85.

The dollar felt no major world market support, with the exception of the yen. The dollar's general slide to the marks is helping on foreign trade systems. The dollar was quoted at 2.9000 against the mark at the outset because of the dollar's general slide to the marks that could be helped on foreign trade systems.

Quiet optimism invades Hanoi

By ROBERT F. FAYE

After nearly 30 years of war or preparation for it, there is an air of quiet optimism and hope that things maybe finally get better in Vietnam. There is a growing sentiment among the South Vietnamese people that the war will end this year. There is an air of quiet optimism and hope that lasting peace will come and soon. The war is finally dying out.

There is an air of quiet optimism and hope that lasting peace will come and soon. The war is finally dying out. South Vietnamese cease-fire violations with American commanders are being reduced. The American commander's attitude is changing. The general American public is becoming more aware of the South Vietnamese people and their needs. There is an air of quiet optimism and hope that lasting peace will come and soon.

Criticism isn't justified

When the Brooklyn Dodgers retired its last star, it was fitting to remember that they also retired their last great player in the major leagues. The Dodgers played a short time later in the World Series in 1951 and 1952, but they never again had a winner in the big leagues. The Dodgers didn't play their best ball of the season until after they retired their last great player.

Winona State could have done better in the NAIA.

Some say the Warriors are a bunch of hot dogs. Yes, they compiled the winningest record (23-4) in the school's history. But the criticism the Warriors have received since 1972-73 has been the so-so team it was for so many years. And the 1972-73 team might have been the best that Winona State could have produced.

Mark Johnson of Peterson hit 62 percent from the free-throw line as a member of the UW-Rice-Warriors Center basketball team. Johnson was named to Southwest Minnesota State's all-oppo- nency team.

At long last, the Obertons of Winona, mainly because Coach Les Wothke starts four blacks, have been the most successful team in the NAIA.

Cathedral knocks off St. Matthew's

Cathedral, after facing the regular-season leader in the American League cellar, with a 4-2 win Monday night in the Oasis Bar & Cafe. The Beavers put up a tough fight, but in the end they couldn't match the Hawks' firepower.

The night's festivities were designed to honor the Hawks this season. Three Hawks were named Most Valuable Player, including the 6-4 senior ace, Don Graham. Bob Gonia and Joe Sheehan. Towering over the others are the 6-7 seniors, Ben Johnson and Bob Bell. Tuesday's victory was the perfect way to cap off the Hawks' season.

Cathedral knocked off St. Matthew's to advance to the state playoffs. The Hawks had an impressive season, but they were disappointed in the final game. Still, they're looking forward to the future.

Bob Gonia, who led the Hawks with 30 points in the championship game, said, "This is just the beginning. We're not going to stop here."

The Hawks have their sights set on the state championships and are determined to make a statement. With this victory, they've taken a major step towards their goal.

Whisman: Swimmers perform as expected

The Whisman Swim Club's awards banquet last year was attended by many of the team's most talented swimmers. The night's festivities were designed to honor the team's achievements and recognize the efforts of the swimmers.

Among the recipients were Karla Peddrick and Sue Semling, who were named the Most Valuable Swimmers of the Year.
