Golda Meir resignation 'irrevocable'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Prime Minister Golda Meir announced her resignation today, saying it was her personal decision and that she had not been 'pushed out of office.' According to a report in the Jerusalem Post, Meir had been under pressure from the United States following a speech in which she criticized American policies.

The decision was announced during a meeting of the Israeli cabinet, which met earlier today. Meir had been prime minister since 1969 and was one of the key figures in the country's establishment.

The announcement came as the Israeli government was facing a growing crisis with the Arab world, particularly over the issue of Jerusalem.

On troop disengagement

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. government has announced plans to withdraw American troops from South Korea by the end of the year. The decision was made following the collapse of the Vietnam War, which had dragged on for over a decade.

The announcement was met with widespread criticism, particularly in South Korea, where American troops had been stationed for many years. The South Korean government had been arguing for some time for the withdrawal of American forces, and the decision was seen as a blow to their efforts.

On Greek oil tanker

Greek oil tanker explodes in river

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A Greek oil tanker exploded in the Delaware River today, killing four crew members and injuring several others. The tanker, owned by the Greek government, had been carrying crude oil from the Persian Gulf.

The explosion occurred near Philadelphia, where the tanker was docked. The cause of the explosion is still under investigation, but it is believed to have been a result of an accident involving the oil.

On Bangladeshi protests

Bangladesh protesters demand independence

CANBERRA (UPI) - Independence demands by Bangladeshi protesters are continuing in the Australian capital. The protesters are seeking to have the countries in the region declared independent of Pakistan.

The protests began in response to the arrest of a prominent Bangladeshi political leader, who was later released. The protesters have been demanding the release of all political prisoners and the withdrawal of Pakistani troops from the region.

Panel gets a maybe on taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) - A panel of experts has recommended a moderate increase in taxes, but also warned that the country is facing a severe fiscal crisis. The panel was appointed by President Nixon and is due to report its findings to the president in the near future.

The panel has been tasked with finding ways to reduce the federal deficit, which has been growing for several years. The panel's recommendations are expected to be announced in the coming weeks.

Inside:

Kissinger issues new threats

Secretary Kissinger has announced new threats against South America, warning that the region is facing a severe economic crisis.

The threats come in the wake of a series of economic shocks, including the collapse of financial markets and a rise in inflation. The United States is reportedly considering steps to help stabilize the region, including financial aid and technical assistance.

South Asia, Africa facing starvation

By JOHN BRINNEN, WASHINGTON (AP) - South Asia and Africa are facing a severe famine, with millions of people at risk of starvation.

The United Nations has estimated that over 200 million people in the region are facing food shortages, with many more at risk of malnutrition. The situation is expected to worsen in the coming months, as the region faces a series of natural disasters and economic shocks.

Arrests seen in Hearst case

A number of arrests have been reported in connection with the Hearst case, which has been the subject of much speculation and controversy.

The case involves the death of预售 in California, with the suspect, Freddi Bavaro, reportedly being held in custody.

By EDWARD CODY

The case has sparked widespread interest, with many people expressing concerns about the treatment of the suspect and the possibility of a cover-up.

South Africa's Apartheid regime

By PETER SIEGEL, WASHINGTON (AP) - South Africa's Apartheid regime has come under increasing pressure to ease its restrictions on civil liberties.

The country's human rights record has been the subject of criticism from around the world, with many countries calling for an end to the country's policies of racial segregation.

The regime has been facing growing pressure to change its policies, with many people expressing concerns about the country's future.
Kissinger faces a hectic schedule

The Secretary of State has returned from a 10-day Mexican honeymoon and will now meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on April 17-18 and on April 19 will meet with President Houari Boumediene of Algeria. Their discussions, which will take place over lunch at the State Department, is expected to advance prospects for the restoration of U.S.-Algerian relations broken off by the minister of the Organization of African States (OAU) last year.

The following week if present, Kissinger will have another talk in a delegation to the Golan Heights. The delegation is here to discuss the problem of disengagement Israeli and Syrian forces in the Golan Heights, as it has been agreed by a few days when the Secretary of State will be in the United States.

Next week, after the U.N. trip, Kissinger will be back here in a gathering of the Latin American Foreign Ministers headed by foreign ministers of the Organization of American States (OAS). The gathering will meet in executive session on Thursday, Kissinger will also meet with President Jacques Barre of Senegal. Their discussions, which will take place over lunch at the State Department, is expected to advance prospects for the restoration of U.S.-Senegalese relations broken off by the minister of the organization of African States (OAU) last year.

On Thursday, Kissinger will also meet with President Ibrahima Seydi of Senegal. Their discussions, which will take place over lunch at the State Department, is expected to advance prospects for the restoration of U.S.-Senegalese relations broken off by the minister of the organization of African States (OAU) last year.

Kissinger will go to New York on Monday, April 17, to address the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. He will then fly to Washington, D.C., and will meet with ministers of the Middle Eastern Mediation Committee.

The meeting was arranged at Kissinger's initiative. It is understood he asked for it because he wanted an opportunity to brief the executive session in the Senate on the situation in the Middle East. Kissinger is scheduled to return to Washington this afternoon, after a meeting with his foreign ministers in his Cabinet.

The wood in the Latsch building is irreplaceable

When I am asked to write about buildings in Winona, I always find myself talking about Latsch's. The building is open to the public, and it is a place where people can gather and enjoy each other's company. It is a place where stories are told, and memories are made. It is a place where history is preserved, and culture is celebrated. It is a place where people connect, and community is formed.

There are many buildings in Winona that are special to me, but none more so than Latsch's. It is a place where I have spent many happy hours, and I have many fond memories of the people I have met there. It is a place where I have learned so much, and it is a place where I have grown.

I know that many others feel the same way about Latsch's. It is a place where people come together, and it is a place where people care about each other. It is a place where people support each other, and it is a place where people care about their community.

I urge the Winona City Council to reconsider its decision to demolish the Latsch building. It is a building that is important to many people, and it is a building that deserves to be preserved. I urge the council to listen to the people who care about Latsch's, and I urge the council to work with the people who care about Latsch's to find a way to preserve it.

The wood in the Latsch building is irreplaceable, and it is a part of our history. It is a part of our culture, and it is a part of our community. It is a part of who we are, and it is a part of who we will be.

I urge the Winona City Council to reconsider its decision to demolish the Latsch building. It is a building that is important to many people, and it is a building that deserves to be preserved. I urge the council to listen to the people who care about Latsch's, and I urge the council to work with the people who care about Latsch's to find a way to preserve it.

Universities being forced to borrow corporate business processes

By JOHN COOPER
NEW YORK (AP) - Caught in fierce financial struggles that threaten to overtake them,

The University of Pennsylvania has decided to tighten its belts, a move that benefits some students, even as the financially strapped school comes to grips with a new reality:

Mandated downsizing.

Admissions officials at the University of Pennsylvania said they had to cut back on the number of students they admitted this year, in part because of the school's financial difficulties. The university is one of many institutions around the country facing similar challenges.

"We're doing everything we can to maintain our financial health," said university spokesman John Meyerson. "But we're also examining all aspects of our operations to ensure we're as efficient and effective as possible.

"It's not easy," he added. "But we're determined to make the tough choices necessary to keep our university strong and vibrant."
Marijuana wholesaler finds business is tailing off badly

By FRANK T. COOK

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — A hometown upstart is helping to drive Kansas' marijuana into a national market, as prices continue to rise.

In the early years of the market, when the government was running its marijuana program, prices were low and the market was dominated by large-scale operations. Today, however, prices have risen dramatically, with small-scale operators becoming more common.

Archer said the rise in prices has been driven by increased demand for the drug, as well as by changes in the market structure. He said that as more and more people turn to marijuana for recreation, the supply has grown, leading to higher prices.

The result is textbook economics, he said, with the price of marijuana rising as demand increases. He said that as the price continues to rise, the market will become more competitive, leading to further price increases.

Archer said that the government hasn't helped much, as it hasn't done anything to increase the supply of marijuana, or to reduce the demand. He said that the government should do more to ensure a steady supply of marijuana, and to keep prices in check.

The price increase has also had an impact on the quality of the marijuana available, he said. He said that as prices have risen, some growers have started cutting corners, leading to a decrease in the quality of the product.

Archer said that despite these challenges, the market is still growing, and that he expects prices to continue to rise in the near future.

Police corruption blamed on political pressure, laws

BY MARGARET GENTRY
WASHINGTON, DC — The growing battle in the United States to regulate organized crime flourishes.

New York has had for the past several years been a major scandal there in the nation's police departments, particularly in the big cities where the forces pushing a wavering federal government.

There is a little problem of hypocrisy. It's all so hypocritical.

One in law rather than the criminal, the police commissioner, said in an interview with gambling transactions. The gambler will so often be trying to make conversation with the officer observing him and he'll try to make conversation with the officer observing him.

Finally, every time in charge — not because they feel it's the right thing to do, but because they are ill equipped to prevent corruption.

There is a little problem of hypocrisy. It's all so hypocritical. People say are an attempt to regulate morals — gambling, the law is ridiculed.

But I think that change will come. In a state like New York, little or nothing is regulation on the police.

Federal judge to step up pace in Mitchell-Stans trial

BY JOHN SOKOLOWSKY
St. Paul (AP) - Federal Judge Leo P. Gagliardi said Tuesday he would speed up the pace of the Mitchell-Stans trial, which was being held in St. Paul.

"We have a lot of work to do," Gagliardi said. "I think we can get to a verdict in this case in a short period of time."

The defense has asked that the trial be moved to another location, a request that the judge has yet to rule on.

Two hearings were scheduled for the next week, which the judge said he would consider expediting.

Compromise effort fails in Messmer's presidential bid

PARIS, (UPI) - French Prime Minister Francois Messmer failed to rally the fragmented Gaullist majority behind his short-lived compromise bid for next month's presidential election.

Gaullist candidate Jacques Chaban-Delmas told newsmen: "I am offering myself to the Gaullists for the majority's candidacy." Messmer, however, has taken himself out of the race.

Messmer's announcement came as three Gaullist candidates had already entered the May 5 election. The 58-year-old Messmer offered himself Tuesday as the majority party's candidate if the others agreed to withdraw.

Political sources said it was not immediately clear how Delmas would react. Delmas' decision made it impossible for the communists, whothered the president, to enter the race.

The top two candidates in the primary would meet in a May runoff. Lagardere's proposed split would be the fourth in the history of France's Fifth Republic.

Legislator and former foreign minister Raymond Barre, who also has a majority of agreement, did not immediately respond to Delmas' decision.

"The top two candidates in the primary would meet in a May runoff if one of them got a majority in the first round," Lagardere said. "The majority's position is to pick up the chances with an 'everyone for himself' approach." Lagardere, who has indicated he won't run, is considering supporting a compromise candidate.

Messmer said the "risk is not worth it."

Le Pen, who has more than 3 million votes, said he would work to get the communists to back his compromise bid.

"We'll work for the communists to get Messmer," Le Pen said.

The president's brother Jean-Claude has been removed from the lead, although he still has a majority of the Gaullist vote.

Rochester couple find love fulfilled

By Jan Oleszewski

Rochester, MN (AP) - A Rochester mother and father whose two adopted children are the only home for the family this year.

When the couple first decided to adopt, they were worried about the legal and emotional aspects of the process.

Now, the couple says they have found a fulfilling way to raise their children.

"We wanted to provide a home for children who need one," the father said.

"We've found that being parents is a rewarding experience," the mother added.

The couple has a son and daughter, and they say they are enjoying the challenges of parenthood.

They say they have learned a lot from their adopted children.

"They have taught us patience and love," the father said.

"They have shown us what it means to give and receive," the mother added.

The couple plans to continue to be adoptive parents in the future.

"We want to continue to be a part of children's lives," the father said.

"We want to make a difference in the lives of children," the mother added.

Women treated with revolutionary equality

In the days when Jesus was a young adult, the temple authorities talked about women in a rather disparaging way. They called women mere sex devices—psychic—without spirit, a mere anatomical sense. But he didn’t see women in that way. He kept it. And he kept it. He “treated women with a seriousness of purpose, a seriousness of intent, a seriousness of purpose, a seriousness of purpose, a seriousness of purpose.”

The world then, and much of the world now, is sincerely prejudiced against women. The prejudice against women has been called the “feminine” prejudice. In his day, Jesus was a liberator of women, dealing with their prejudices and their problems. But the women were not the only ones to whom he paid attention. He was concerned with the women of the temple, and the temple authorities were concerned with the women of the temple.

In another incident involving the temple authorities and women, Jesus said, “Go and do not sin again.” The temple authorities were shocked. They heard enough of Jesus to retreat. His gaze searching out the temple authorities, his face set, his voice strong. He saw the temple authorities, and they saw him. He saw the temple authorities, and they saw him. They looked at him, and they looked at him. They looked at him, and they looked at him. They looked at him, and they looked at him.

A great, glowing joy came into the temple authorities. They knew that they had accepted Jesus. They knew that they had accepted Jesus. They knew that they had accepted Jesus. They knew that they had accepted Jesus. They knew that they had accepted Jesus. They knew that they had accepted Jesus.

The temple authorities were shocked. They heard enough of Jesus to retreat. His gaze searching out the temple authorities, his face set, his voice strong. Lake cities upset with water plans

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Three North Shore cities may be forced to join a lawsuit opposing the proposed construction of a large water pipeline by Reserve Mining, now being heard by Lord, if the judge rules against them.

The cities have issued a 10-page plan to build a water and sewer system in the near future, and the judge will have to decide whether the plan is feasible.

Specifically, the judge will have to decide whether the plan is feasible and the judge is likely to decide whether the plan is feasible.

Boyle denies order of close friend

Boyle, who is a former United Steelworkers official, denies that he knew the two companies, and said that Boyle is on trial for the crime. He also denied that Boyle is a defendant in the case.

"His trial last week was a Cambodia-style trial," Boyle said. "I don't think this is a fair trial, and I'm surprised to hear that Boyle is on trial for the crime.

WILLIAMSBURG (UPI) - The Internal Revenue Service will monitor the party lines to catch the names of anyone advocating so-called extremist views.

At a press conference Tuesday, Treasury Secretary William Simon said the IRS is collecting information about extremist groups and had compiled a list of 12,000 classified documents. By January 1973, according to an IRS internal memo, the administration and the Nixon administration's economic advisers had amassed 8,000 classified documents, according to a memo signed by Secretary Simon.

The memo was made public Wednesday by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., a Republican from Connecticut. The unit was set up in the IRS in 1969.

ECONOMY CRISIS

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The White House has denounced as "unfounded" an attack by House Speaker Carl Albert on the Nixon administration's economic policies.

"The average American worker surely knows and his family have been in a recession for more than a year," Albert told the House Tuesday by Senate Carl Albert said there was a distinct possibility that federal agents had listened in on party line conversations.

Gray referred the memo to the IRS, which said it was after the proposal had been considered and a rejection of the proposal.

"It also said that members of non-violent groups also were being included. The memo was signed by John J. Flynn, regional commissioner for the IRS, who told the House that the memo was made public.

"For more than a year, the economy has been disastrous," Economic Advisers, said.

"The government witnesses have testified in the hearing.

Weickersa said he received the memo from the IRS.

"There was a distinct possibility that there was a roadblock in wiretapping," Gray said, referring the memo.

Solar energy described as power of the future

STROUD, Minn. — (AP) — Alex Jordan, President of Minnesota Power Co. during the recent meeting of the Board of Directors, said that "the board is studying a number of things" in relation to the use of solar energy. Jordan made the statement while speaking about the recent report on solar energy which was presented to the board at the meeting. He also mentioned that "the board is looking into the feasibility of using solar energy in the near future.

"Solar energy is a promising alternative to traditional fossil fuels," Jordan said. "It is clean, abundant, and sustainable, and it has the potential to significantly reduce our dependence on foreign oil."

Jordan noted that the board has already taken steps to explore the potential of solar energy, including the formation of a working group to study the issue in more detail.

"We believe that solar energy has a significant role to play in our energy future," Jordan said. "It is important that we continue to support research and development in this area to ensure that we are well-positioned to take advantage of this important technology in the years to come."
